PRESIDENT WILL SIGN NEW ACT, FRIEND STATES

Legislation Approved By Senate After Four Years Before Congress

WASHINGTON, June 22—The Hobbs bill, signed and sealed by congress, was sent to President Truman today after a four-year legislative battle touched off by charges of racketeering in the trucking unions.

The measure, which has been the subject of heated debate in both houses of congress since 1942, passed the senate late yesterday without a dissenting vote.

It provides a fine of $10,000 and 20 years in prison for violators. At present, federal anti-racketeering laws are not applicable to unions or their leaders.

Sen. Carl Hatch, D. N. M., long a personal friend of Mr. Truman, said he was "confident" that the President would sign the bill. He was joined by Rep. Jennings Randolph, D. W. Va., a leader of the house pro-labor bloc, who said it was legislation "that is very much needed."

Blocks 'Extortion'
The bill, sponsored by Rep. Sam Hobbs, D. Ala., would prevent anyone imposing a "burden" on interstate commerce by "robbery or extortion." Proponents of the bill have claimed that it is general legislation designed to cover a multitude of situations.

But the bill was born specifically out of a supreme court decision in early 1942 concerning local 807 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters. The local had been charged with violation of the Copeland act, designed to prevent racketeering in interstate commerce.

The union was accused of stopping trucks entering New York City and demanding that the wages of a union driver be paid for entering the city. In testimony before the court, it was claimed that many of the trucks were driven by union drivers from New Jersey and other states but that the extra wages were demanded anyway.

The majority opinion, delivered by former associate justice James F. Byrnes, held that the union members could not be held guilty of extortion as long as they were bona fide union members and demanded no more than a day's wages. The latter was $9.42 for a heavy truck and $8.41 for a light truck.

Passed In 1942
Hobbs introduced a bill to impose heavy penalties upon "racketeers" in interstate commerce and it was passed by the house in the Spring of 1942. But it was pigeonholed by the senate judiciary committee for the remainder of that session.

Hobbs reintroduced the bill in the next congress but no action was taken until December of last year when it was passed again by the house. The senate several weeks ago attached it as a rider to the Case strike control bill.

BRITONS SAY "GO ON HOME"

SHOWN WITH HIS WIFE, the former Alma Taylor of Trent, England, is ex-GI Richard Harding Davis, who is the center of a controversy between the British people and their government. England's home office has ordered Davis, who wants to reside in England, to return to the U. S. and his native Columbus, O., due to "rationing difficulties." The people of Trent first took up Davis' campaign to stay with his wife, and now all of England is pitching in besieging the government with petitions on the GI's behalf. (International)

COMPROMISE IS EXPECTED AT BIG 4 MEETING

Byrnes and Molotov May Have Worked Out New Plan On Trieste Situation

PARIS, June 22—Some signs of big four compromise may emerge from the foreign ministers council today as a result of a long discussion last night between Secretary of State James F. Byrnes and Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov.

Molotov and Byrnes were understood to have covered the whole field of complex problems before the foreign ministers when the Russian was a dinner guest of the American.

They were together three hours at the dinner table and later in the evening. While neither side was talking for publication, there were signs of a possible break looking toward a compromise.

Not 'Aggressive'
Some French quarters saw a hopeful sign in the fact that the stands taken yesterday by the four ministers were "not aggressive." They felt that a common realization of the dire possibilities of a conference failure might put further compromises in the cards.

Trieste still was the key issue before the ministers. Byrnes and Molotov were understood to have discussed Trieste as well as other problems in the drafting of the European peace treaties.

Secrecy Surrounds Talks
Shielded by intensified secrecy, the foreign ministers were arguing the crux of the entire conference. The result may lead to an agreement making the council meeting a success, or to a division of Europe into two rival blocs.

Record Peacetime Army And Navy Funds Voted

WASHINGTON, June 22—Racing against a June 30 deadline, the senate and house in one day approved four fiscal 1947 appropriation bills totaling $13,250,090,683, including record peacetime funds for the Army and Navy.

Largest single bill was the house-approved $7,091,034,700 measure to maintain an army averaging 1,279,000 men during the next fiscal year.

The Army appropriation also includes $375,000,000 for peacetime atomic energy research, $281,000,000 for other scientific research and $350,000,000 to help feed starving peoples in occupied areas. Although the Army appropriation is only about one-tenth of the record 1942 wartime appropriation, it is by far the highest peacetime military appropriation in U. S. history.

The second largest appropriation approved by the senate late yesterday was a record peacetime $4,100,000,000 Navy bill. It provides for the maintenance of a fleet of 1,045 combat ships and a force of 558,000 officers and men.

Senators also passed legislation to give the treasury and post office departments $1,606,000,000 and the state, justice and commerce departments and federal judiciary $453,055,983 for the next fiscal year.

All three bills passed by the senate have been approved by the house. But they now go back to the house for adjustment of differing amendments.

Both the Army and Navy bills carry no-strike amendments.

The house attached a rider providing that no Army funds could be used to pay war department employees who strike against the government, or who belong to unions asserting the right to strike against the government.

The senate approved a similar provision in the Navy bill and (Continued on Page Two)

PROBE OF RFC SETUP PLANNED

Investigation Promised After Audit Of Books Shows Lax Bookkeeping

WASHINGTON, June 22—A congressional investigation was promised today into charges of lax bookkeeping by the nation's largest lending institution—the Reconstruction Finance Corp.

The charges were made by Comptroller General Lindsay C. Warren who turned the matter over to congress after an audit of RFC's books disclosed a condition of "such seriousness and moment" Warren's criticism was aimed at the RFC's accounting practices but did not accuse the agency of wrongful irregularities.

Chairman Brent Spence, D. Ky., of the house banking committee, said that when his group begins consideration of a measure to continue RFC's lending authority for two more years after next Jan. 22 it "will investigate (Continued on Page Two)

ANY COMPLAINTS AGAINST JACOBS TO BE CHECKED

WASHINGTON, June 22—A justice department spokesman said today that the department would study any complaint made regarding Promoter Mike Jacobs control on professional boxing and then decide whether a full-scale investigation should be conducted.

Meanwhile, Rep. Donald L. O'Toole, D. N. Y., who has described the Jacobs-sponsored heavyweight championship bout between Joe Louis and Billy Conn as a "swindle," said he planned to call on Attorney General Tom C. Clark Monday to discuss his complaints against Jacobs.

Despite the spokesman's protestations that there appeared to be no basis for an investigation of boxing and professional baseball in light of the anti-trust laws "at this time," it was known that a preliminary study actually is being made. Such a study would determine whether a full-scale investigation of the two sports should be recommended to the attorney general.

The spokesman took the position that there could be no inquiry inasmuch as no complaint had been filed with the department against either Jacobs or the major leagues. He said he could not predict what might happen later.

Next came reports of a "huge snake" around the Kenton area where the reptile was said to have snapped the ankle of one Orland Packer, 32, Forest, O.

The snake caretaker of the Columbus zoo was rushed to the area to brief the local citizens on the art of snake catching but so far the reptile still is on the loose.

Then came Chite, a monkey who escaped from nowhere and was re-captured by a Columbus swimming pool employee who today was busy teaching the animal how to drink beer and to take showers.

Search For Victims In Dallas Hotel Explosion

POLICE and firemen search the rubble left by an explosion in the basement of the Baker hotel at Dallas, Tex. The blast, believed to have occurred in an air conditioning unit, buckled concrete partitions killing eight persons and injuring 36.

Experts Probing Hotel Blast Fatal To Seven

DALLAS, Tex., June 22—The fire department called in experts today to find the cause of an explosion that shook the $5,000,000 Baker hotel and killed seven persons in the nation's third major hotel tragedy within a month.

The explosion occurred in the basement of the 750 room building yesterday. The blast ruptured pipes of the hotel's air conditioning system, and deadly ammonia gas filled the basement, rising to the floors above.

Hotel officials said 41 employees were injured. No guests were injured even slightly, they said.

The explosion crumbled basement walls and left a huge pile of cement blocks, twisted machinery and general debris from which firemen extricated the bodies. Police Lieut. L. T. Spencer believed there was one body still under the rubble, but could not substantiate the belief.

Twenty-man fire department squads working to clear the basement said it would take 24 to 48 hours to determine whether all the bodies had been recovered.

Charles Hodge, a Negro in charge of the sub-basement washroom helped save 97 laundry workers, mostly women. He threw wet sheets over their heads and shouted to them to keep low to avoid the ammonia fumes. Crawl- (Continued on Page Two)

ALP WITHDRAWS SUPPORT FROM REP. O'TOOLE

NEW YORK, June 22—Rep. Donald L. O'Toole, D. N. Y., who blasted fight promoter Mike Jacobs for the staging of the Louis-Conn heavyweight championship fight, lost the support today of the American Labor party which backed him for election in 1944.

The A. L. P. denounced O'Toole "for his cheap and vulgar method of securing publicity with a pompous display of righteousness and breast beating."

Abe Weisburd, chairman of the A. L. P. in O'Toole's 13th congressional district, said the party would not support the congressman either in the August primaries or in the Fall election, because of his "inferences" against Joe Louis and Billy Conn.

There were 12 foot or paw prints that indicated, if the animal had four legs, it left three sets of tracks; if it had three legs, four sets of tracks; if it walked on its back two—or front two—six sets of tracks. The prints were two inches deep.

BYRNES VOTED SPECIAL POWERS

Housecleaning Of State Department Predicted By Sen. Russell

WASHINGTON, June 22—Sen. Richard B. Russell, D. Ga., today predicted a "thorough housecleaning" of suspected "fellow travelers" in the state department under special powers the senate voted for Secretary of State James F. Byrnes.

The senate wrote into the state department appropriation bill power for Byrnes to fire any state department employee he chooses without regard for civil service rules protecting government employees against dismissal, except for proven cause.

The amendment, which the house undoubtedly will accept, would let such employees exercise their civil service rights to claim a job in any other government agency.

Russell said the amendment was sponsored by the senate appropriations committee after hearing testimony that the state department (Continued on Page Two)

BANANA DROUTH IS BLAMED ON OPA CEILINGS

WASHINGTON, June 22—Yes, we can have more bananas. That is, there can be more if the OPA will boost the wholesale prices of bananas handled by small importers—according to Arthur Schwartz, Miami, Fla., secretary of the Caribbean Banana Association.

For three years, he said, the OPA kept his request for an audience with OPA officials in a refrigerator.

That shouldn't happen, he felt, especially to a banana man.

So Schwartz kept trying, and finally got his chance to present the small banana importers' case to the OPA yesterday at the investigation of the senate small business committee.

Schwartz said small independent importers are allowed only a 4-cent-a-pound ceiling on the bananas they bring into the country, while the large importers' "banana monopoly" gets a 5½ cent ceiling.

Actually, Schwartz said, it costs the independents 5½ to 6 cents a pound to bring the fruit in from Central America and the large companies can do it for half that.

Unless the small companies' ceiling is raised, according to Schwartz, a lot of bananas are going to do their ripening in Central America and never get to this country. He said a hike in the ceilings would double banana imports by the independent companies.

OPA CHIEF SAYS PRODUCERS HOLD BACK ANIMALS

More Meat Coming Whether Or Not Controls Are Lifted Is Prediction

SHORTAGE DUE IN WINTER

Grain Scarcity Will Cause New Shortage; Bread To Return Soon

WASHINGTON, June 22—Economic Stabilizer Chester Bowles said today that more meat will reach retail stores after July 1—regardless of whether price controls are continued on it.

"If the ceilings are taken off, prices are bound to be substantially higher," he said. "If the ceilings are kept on you'll get that meat at ceiling prices."

"But, in either case, you'll get more meat."

He said in his weekly radio address that cattle and hog producers are holding their livestock off the market because congress has taken steps toward removing price controls on meat on June 30.

He said he did not blame the meat producers for holding back, but that he hoped congress would leave price control on meat in its final vote on OPA extension legislation.

Bowles again appealed for congressional passage of strong OPA legislation.

In November or December, he said meat supplies will drop off again and remain low for several months because of shortage of grains for feeding.

Other Predictions

Bowles made these predictions about other foods:

Poultry—Outlook good at least through August.

Eggs—Should be plentiful at least until next Winter, with supplies sufficient to give everyone at least one egg a day.

Bread—"A little more" in the stores soon, but production will only be 60 per cent of the pre-war rate.

Cheese—Production will hit an all time high in 1946.

Fresh fruits and vegetables—A bumper crop.

Canned fruits and vegetables—More plentiful, with the possible exception of tomatoes.

Sugar—Will continue tight until next Spring, with the possibility of larger supplies then, but probably not enough to increase the ration.

Nearing Quota

WASHINGTON, June 22—A high agriculture department official said today that the United States would come "very close" to getting all the meat it needs to meet export commitments for the first half of the year.

AGREEMENT ON PRICE CONTROLS IS ANTICIPATED

WASHINGTON, June 22—Senate and house efforts to adjust their differences on extension of price controls neared the finish line today as conferees guardedly hinted an agreement might be reached by nightfall.

As the conferees met for the fourth time, Senate Democratic Leader Aiken W. Barkley, D. Ky., said that completion of a compromise price bill today is "probable"—but "I think we can do it."

Although mystery has surrounded progress made by the 14 conferees during their secret meetings, reports indicated that the compromise legislation would include provisions leading to a general retail price increase for virtually all manufactured goods.

One conferee said the group had agreed to a senate-approved plan drafted by Sen. Robert A. Taft, R. O., to allow manufacturers to charge their October, 1941, prices plus any increased costs that have occurred since that time.

The price increases, it was said, would be passed on to consumers on a dollar-for-dollar basis.

In its present form, the conferees' plan would abolish OPA's program to keep retail prices down by requiring distributors and dealers to absorb part of any increased costs.

Shipping Is Worried

He added, however, that there was some question whether all the meat obtained could be shipped by the deadline. He pointed out that meat—unlike wheat and corn—must be carefully packed, loaded and refrigerated.

There had been some concern that the government would not be able to meet its commitments because of the dwindling flow of meat through federally-inspected channels. The government gets its meat for export through set-aside orders.

The agriculture department, in a review of the meat situation, said order buyers and shippers last week took from 70 to 92 per cent of all cattle receipts. In some cases the big packers got only two to three per cent of the run.

Government 'Take' Small

That meant that the government's share of federally inspected meat was very small, even with hefty set-asides.

The agriculture official pointed out, however, that the department recently had reinforced its set-aside order by requiring packers to make up any set-asides not delivered in the past several weeks.

This new order plus the government's normal share of current meat production, he said, will make it possible for the U. S. to nearly meet its commitments. At the same time, he added, it meant a further cut in civilian supplies.

FOOD COUNCIL WANTS RUSSIA

The Canadian-born Fitzgerald, who will coordinate the work of the council and its commodity committees, was secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson's right bower in this country's relief effort.

He takes over the job of finding the food to fill the world's war and drought depleted larders for the next 18 months at least. The job may last longer if world agriculture is not back somewhere near normal by that time.

Fitzgerald said it will be about two weeks before the new council can start operating. Meanwhile, the combined British-American food board which it replaces, will continue the task of funneling supplies into shortage areas.

BABY KILLED WHEN JUG OF GASOLINE EXPLODES

DAYTON, O., June 22—A 10-month-old boy was burned to death and his mother suffered serious burns when a glass jug of gasoline exploded at her Vandalia, O., home last night.

Fire Chief E. L. Powers of Vandalia said the victim, Robert L. Martin, Jr., upset the gasoline, the fumes of which were ignited by a kerosene stove.

The 18-year-old mother, Mrs. Esther Martin, was released from Good Samaritan hospital after treatment for face and body burns.

RECORDS CLAIMED

DAYTON, O., June 22—Five more world speed records were claimed today by the Army Air forces as the result of a 3,105 mile round trip flight from here to Tucson, Ariz., by a Wright field B-29 Superfortress. The B-29 took off from Wright field yesterday, flew at an average speed of 265 miles per hour with a 22,040 pound payload, and made the round trip in 11 hours and 42 minutes.

NEW RECORD SET

COLUMBUS, June 22—Enrollment figures at Ohio State university today continued to rise to new highs with a total of 10,655 now registered. The previous record high for the Summer quarter was 7,000 in 1942.

ing through the debris, he led them from the death trap.

Firemen wearing gas masks kept the number of dead at a minimum by plunging into the basement and leading blinded employees through the choking fumes.

Firemen said there was no fire, and were at a loss to explain the cause of the explosion. However, two oven tenders in the basement bakery said that "flames from the oven leaped out at us."

"We jumped back with the dough still in our hands," said Bobby Jack Payne.

"Walls were caving in all around us and we were so scared for a minute we didn't know what to do," said Harold Thurman. "Then we ran."

The blast was the worst hotel disaster in Dallas' history. It ranked third in a recent series of hotel tragedies, following a fire in the Canfield hotel at Dubuque, Ia., which killed 19 persons, and the LaSalle hotel blaze in Chicago which killed 61.

City building inspector John Fies said that the Baker hotel, built in 1925 and one of the finest in the southwest, still was safe despite the crumbled basement and a gaping hole in the east wall. Insurance experts estimated the damage at $500,000.

It was confined principally to the basement. The only persons permitted in the lobby today were guests and persons arriving with reservations. While guests and employees were fleeing from the building, several men groped through the lobby to the desk and demanded the vacated rooms of those who hastily checked out.

"They saw the guests running out and realized that at last we had some vacancies," said a clerk. Although none was injured, some guests suffered slightly from the fumes which rose through the 17 story building. All were removed from the hotel but were allowed to return four hours later.

said there should be careful study of the anti-racketeering measure to determine that it does not violate the fundamental rights of labor.

Denies Violations

Hobbs said, however, that the bill states specifically that rights guaranteed by the Wagner act, the railroad retirement act, the fair labor standards act and the Norris-LaGuardia act are not to be interfered with.

"These four acts are considered the magna charta of labor," he added. "This bill does not invade the legitimate rights of the unions. It need not trouble an honest man."

ment was helpless to rid its rolls of suspected "fellow travelers" under civil service rules.

"They could build up a strong case of suspicion but not one which would stand up before a civil service commission hearing," Russell said. "So, we decided to give Byrnes extraordinary powers to cope with the situation. I am confident that there will be a thorough housecleaning of fellow travelers in the state department with this new power."

Russell conceded that the suspected "fellow travelers" would undoubtedly find jobs in other government agencies. But, he said, "they won't be in a place where they could influence our foreign affairs."

The Georgia senator said that Donald Russell, assistant secretary of state in charge of administrative matters, indicated that the department had some people it would like to fire because of suspected leftist leanings.

A 23-year-old Circleville man was arrested at 1:30 a. m. Saturday on South Court street near the Norfolk and Western railroad right-of-way for investigation of a reported attack on a 16-year-old Circleville girl.

Police said two other girls identified the prisoner as the molester. The three girls were said to have been enroute home from Gold Cliff park. The father of the 16-year-old girl said he would file a formal charge against the man. Police Chief William F. McCrady was to question all three girls some time Saturday.

added a penalty of one year's imprisonment and $1,000 fine for those who did strike.

The senate cut $39,718,000 from the house version of the Navy bill before sending it back for consideration of amendments.

An expected wrangle over a provision in the treasury-postoffice bill hiking the silver price to 90.3 cents an ounce until June 30, 1938 failed to develop.

The treasury sold silver at 71.11 cents until congress let its authority to do so expire on Dec. 31. The house authorized the treasury to resume selling silver at the old price, but the senate voted to increase the price to $1.29 an ounce after June 30, 1948.

As approved by the senate the state-justice-commerce bill provided $131,139,523 for the state department; $99,952,250 for justice; $205,906,720 for commerce, and $16,057,490 for the federal judiciary.

Stumbling blocks to early agreement in senate-house conferences probably will be the silver price provision and funds added to the state department's cultural relations and information service program by the senate.

Another informal private session of Byrnes, Molotov, Ernest Bevin and Georges Bidault was set today. Very little public information will be forthcoming while the talks are in the present critical stage, it was indicated.

No News Revealed

What if any headway Byrnes and Molotov made toward reconciling their conflicting views was not indicated. Neither side made any change of position during the four-power afternoon talks. Russia insisted on giving Trieste to Yugoslavia. The western powers again said Italy should have it. All parties agreed that the ministers had reached the hard core of their negotiations after a week of preliminary sparring. Since they assembled last Saturday they have discussed minor economic aspects of the Italian treaty and agreed to set aside a decision on the Italian colonies for one year.

Agreement on Trieste probably would bring speedy agreement on all other outstanding questions.

OPA CHIEF SAYS PRODUCERS HOLD BACK ANIMALS

More Meat Coming Whether Or Not Controls Are Lifted Is Prediction

(Continued from Page One) his name, also disclosed for the first time that U. S. meat commitments to foreign countries are between 10 and 20 per cent lower than its goal of exporting 1,000,000,000 pounds by July 1.

Shipping Is Worry He added, however, that there was some question whether all the meat obtained could be shipped by the deadline. He pointed out that meat—unlike wheat and corn—must be carefully packed, loaded and refrigerated.

There had been some concern that the government would not be able to meet its commitments because of the dwindling flow of meat through federally-inspected channels. The government gets its meat for export through set-aside orders.

The agriculture department, in a review of the meat situation, said order buyers and shippers last week took from 70 to 92 per cent of all cattle receipts. In some cases the big packers got only two to three per cent of the run.

Government Take Small That meant that the government's share of federally inspected meat was very small, even with hefty set-asides.

The agriculture official pointed out, however, that the department recently had reinforced its set-aside order by requiring packers to make up any set-asides not delivered in the past several weeks.

This new order plus the government's normal share of current meat production, he said, will make it possible for the U. S. to nearly meet its commitments. At the same time, he added, it meant a further cut in civilian supplies.

FOOD COUNCIL WANTS RUSSIA

The Canadian-born Fitzgerald, who will coordinate the work of the council and its commodity committees, was secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson's right bower in this country's relief effort.

He takes over the job of finding the food to fill the world's war and drought depleted larders for the next 18 months at least. The job may last longer if world agriculture is not back somewhere near normal by that time.

Fitzgerald said it will be about two weeks before the new council can start operating. Meanwhile, the combined British-American food board which it replaces, will continue the task of funneling supplies into shortage areas.

BABY KILLED WHEN JUG OF GASOLINE EXPLODES

DAYTON, O., June 22—A 10-month-old boy was burned to death and his mother suffered serious burns when a glass jug of gasoline exploded at their Vandalia, O., home last night.

Zire Chief E. L. Powers of Vandalia said the victim, Robert L. Martin, Jr., upset the gasoline, the fumes of which were ignited by a kerosene stove.

The 18-year-old mother, Mrs. Esther Martin, was released from Good Samaritan hospital after treatment for face and body burns.

RECORDS CLAIMED

DAYTON, O., June 22—Five more world speed records were claimed today by the Army Air forces as the result of a 3,105 mile round trip flight from here to Tucson, Ariz., by a Wright field B-29 Superfortress. The B-29 took off from Wright field yesterday, flew at an average speed of 265 miles per hour with a 22,040 pound payload, and made the round trip in 11 hours and 42 minutes.

NEW RECORD SET

COLUMBUS, June 22—Enrollment figures at Ohio State university today continued to rise to new highs with a total of 10,655 now registered. The previous record high for the summer quarter was 7,000 in 1942.

Experts Probing Hotel Blast Fatal To Seven

ing through the debris, he led them from the death trap.

Firemen wearing gas masks kept the number of dead at a minimum by plunging into the basement and leading blinded employees through the choking fumes.

Firemen said there was no fire, and were at a loss to explain the cause of the explosion. However, two oven tenders in the basement bakery said that "flames from the oven leaped out at us."

"We jumped back with the dough still in our hands," said Bobby Jack Payne.

"Walls were caving in all around us and we were so scared for a minute we didn't know what to do," said Harold Thurman. "Then we ran."

The blast was the worst hotel disaster in Dallas' history. It ranked third in a recent series of hotel tragedies, following a fire in the Canfield hotel at Dubuque, Ia., which killed 19 persons, and the LaSalle hotel blaze in Chicago which killed 61.

City building inspector John Fies said that the Baker hotel, built in 1925 and one of the finest in the southwest, still was safe despite the crumbled basement and a gaping hole in the east wall. Insurance experts estimated the damage at $500,000.

It was confined principally to the basement. The only persons permitted in the lobby today were guests and persons arriving with reservations. While guests and employees were fleeing from the building, several men groped through the lobby to the desk and demanded the vacated rooms of those who hastily checked out.

"They saw the guests running out and realized that at last we had some vacancies," said a clerk.

Although none was injured, some guests suffered slightly from the fumes which rose through the 17 story building. All were removed from the hotel but were allowed to return four hours later.

PRESIDENT WILL SIGN NEW ACT, FRIEND STATES

(Continued from Page One) said there should be careful study of the anti-racketeering measure to determine that it does not violate the fundamental rights of labor.

Denies Violations Hobbs said, however, that the bill states specifically that rights guaranteed by the Wagner act, the railroad retirement act, the fair labor standards act and the Norris-LaGuardia act are not to be interfered with. "These four acts are considered the magna charta of labor," he added. "This bill does not invade the legitimate rights of the unions. It need not trouble an honest man."

Hatch said that President Truman's veto of the Case bill could not be considered an adequate indication of the fate of the Hobbs bill. The legislation, he said, had been "misrepresented" to the President at the time.

BYRNES VOTED SPECIAL POWERS

"They could build up a strong case of suspicion but not one which would stand up before a civil service commission hearing," Russell said. "So, we decided to give Byrnes extraordinary powers to cope with the situation. I am confident that there will be a thorough housecleaning of fellow travelers in the state department with this new power."

Russell conceded that the suspected "fellow travelers" would undoubtedly find jobs in other government agencies. But, he said, "they won't be in a place where they could influence our foreign affairs."

The Georgia senator said that Donald Russell, assistant secretary of state in charge of administrative matters, indicated that the department had some people it would like to fire because of suspected leftist leanings.

MAN HELD FOR ALLEGED ATTACK ON GIRL OF 16

A 23-year-old Circleville man was arrested at 1:30 a. m. Saturday on South Court street near the Norfolk and Western railroad right-of-way for investigation of a reported attack on a 16-year-old Circleville girl.

Police said two other girls identified the prisoner as the molester. The three girls were said to have been enroute home from Gold Cliff park. The father of the 16-year-old girl said he would file a formal charge against the man. Police Chief William F. McCrady was to question all three girls some time Saturday.

SENATE CONFIRMS NEW RECONVERSION DIRECTOR

WASHINGTON, June 22—The senate has confirmed John R. Steelman as director of war mobilization and reconversion.

Steelman, former presidential labor adviser, replaces John W. Snyder, who resigned to become secretary of treasury. Steelman's term will expire in 1948.

The senate also confirmed the nominations of three assistant secretaries of labor and one member of the national labor relations board.

The senate cut $39,718,000 from the house version of the Navy bill before sending it back for consideration of amendments.

An expected wrangle over a provision in the treasury-postoffice bill hiking the silver price to 90.3 cents an ounce until June 30, 1938 failed to develop.

The treasury sold silver at 71.11 cents until congress let its authority to do so expire on Dec. 31. The house authorized the treasury to resume selling silver at the old price, but the senate voted to increase the price to $1.29 an ounce after June 30, 1948.

As approved by the senate the state-justice-commerce bill provided $131,139,523 for the state department; $99,952,250 for justice; $205,906,720 for commerce, and $16,057,490 for the federal judiciary.

Stumbling blocks to early agreement in senate-house conferences probably will be the silver price provision and funds added to the state department's cultural relations and information service program by the senate.

Deaths and Funerals

GOODMAN RITES

Funeral services for William A. Goodman, 77, Walnut township farmer who died at 8 a. m. Friday in St. Anthony's hospital, Columbus, will be conducted at 2:30 p. m. Sunday in the Deffenbaugh chapel. # SCIENCE VISUALIZES OPERATION CROSSROADS

THE CATASTROPHIC FORCE of the atom bomb which will be dropped on a 100-ship target fleet at Bikini Atoll in the Marshall Islands is dramatically illustrated above in artist Louis Biedermann's conception of the projected test—Operation Crossroads. Scientists believe that the mighty bomb, similar to the one which leveled Nagasaki, will create thousand-mile-per-hour winds, a giant tidal wave, and heat up to 100,000,000 degrees Fahrenheit. Observers on ships from eight to fifteen miles distant will wear opaque glasses, but they still will have to cover their eyes and turn away at the moment of the blast. Failure to observe this caution will result in temporary blindness, Captain G. M. Lyon, Navy medical officer responsible for the safety of personnel, has warned. A huge cloud of radioactive gases and particles will rise like a thunderhead above the stricken target fleet. From it may fall a deadly sprinkle. Normally, these particles would be a menacing factor for hours, but the bomb's hot gases are expected to stir up a man-made thunderstorm so that the radioactive particles probably will descend much sooner in a deluge of rain.

The floating targets, including 35 warships ranging from submarines to battleships and carriers, will cover a wide area, so that some will escape disintegration. Scientists say the catastrophic power of the atomic explosion probably will crush the hulls of ships in the immediate target range and that steel may be fused by a ball of fire generating a terrific heat. Sensitive instruments as far away as San Francisco are expected to record the pressure wave which will strike across the ocean floor. The ships will be in water 60-feet deep, but the blast may cause 200-foot waves.

THE EXPERTS TALK ON THE ATOM BOMB

Those who understand the possibilities of Nuclear Fission give their opinions

J. R. Oppenheimer, who was in charge of the Los Alamos, N. M., laboratory during the war and now with the California Institute of Technology:—"We are aware of the effective use to which atomic weapons can be put in attacking enemy combat personnel or fortifications but the power for destruction is greatest in strategic bombing. This, as we have learned, means the destruction of whole cities and their populations and their industrial plants."

J. R. Oppenheimer

Harold C. Urey, noted scientist and winner of the 1934 Nobel prize in chemistry; a member of the Uranium Commission now with the University of Chicago:—"It is necessary to realize that we are facing the most dangerous situation in human history. In the event of the use of atomic weapons in a world war, all countries and peoples would be so weakened that they could not survive. It seems certain that all civilization would be retarded for centuries."

Harold C. Urey

Gen. H. H. Arnold, of the Army Air Forces during World War II:—"One of the most important changes that atomic explosives have made in the nature of air power is to cut down the heavy cost of destruction. Early in the late war, complete destruction of cities had become a definitely accomplished fact. During the war, great advances were made in strategic bombing. Today, the atom bomb dwarfs all previous advances in modern warfare."

Gen. H. H. Arnold

Philip Morrison, now at Cornell University, who was active on the Chicago project and studied the effects of the Hiroshima bombing:—"The next time these bombs are dropped, it will not be as it was in Japan. There, a single bomb fell on Hiroshima—in the future they will rain down by the hundreds and cities will evaporate into space. Bringing the picture directly home, remember that a single bomb would wipe out an entire section of a great city."

Philip Morrison

Dr. Leo Szilard, from Budapest, whose vision was, in a very large measure, responsible for the bomb project:—"Atomic energy opens amazing new fields—especially in medicine. An atom can be put in carbon and fed into the human body. Then its course can be followed and, for the first time the flow of matter through the body can be definitely traced and watched. . . . But when intended for conflict between great powers, it creates a new war hazard."

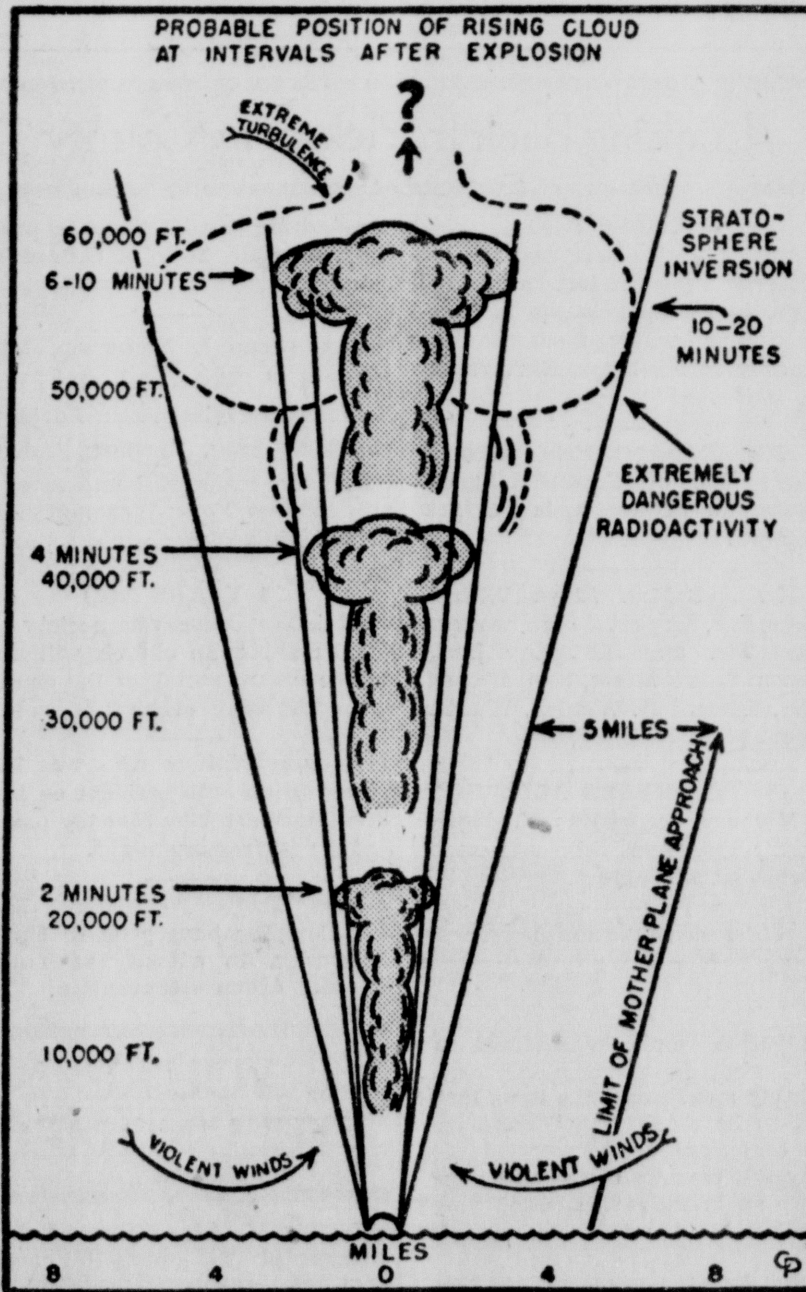

Dr. Leo Szilard

Dr. E. O. Lawrence, who aided in building the first atomic bomb:—"The uses of atomic energy for the future comfort and betterment of mankind may very well be limitless. The prospects may seem to some fantastic. It will be a sort of Aladdin's lamp, a mere rubbing of which brings a Geni capable of achieving wonders. It may be driving trains and operating ships in the foreseeable future. It will affect medicine, and scientists talk of using it on cancer."

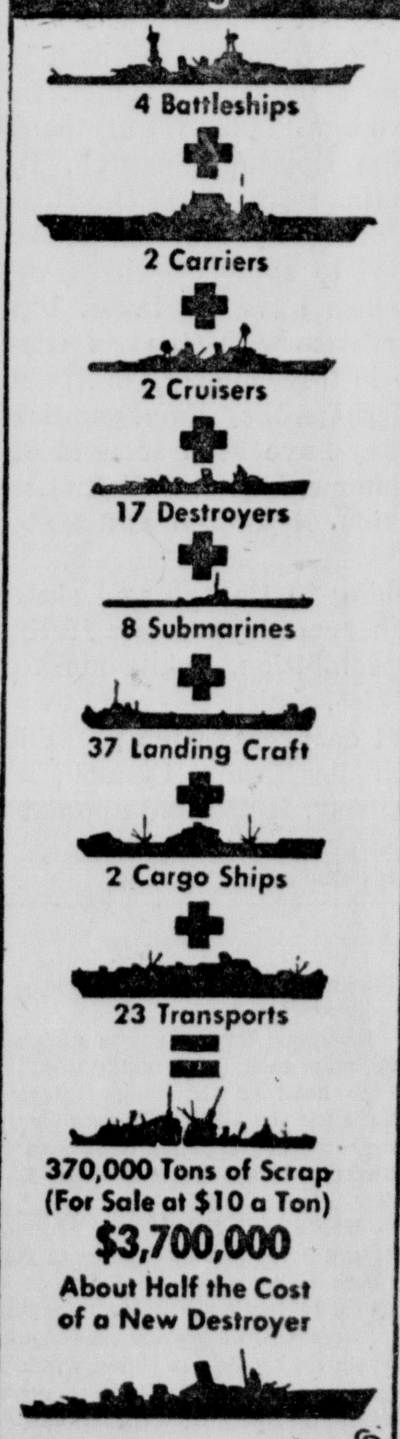

Dr. E. O. Lawrence

THIS DRAWING shows the cloud of radioactive smoke, steam and extraneous matter which will rise when the atom bomb is set off over Bikini Lagoon. High-speed cameras will record every phase of the cloud which the Joint Army-Navy Task Force One believes will ascend over 60,000 feet, according to the chart which they prepared.

Atom Target Value

ALTHOUGH the target ships to be used at Bikini were in service during the war, most would have been relegated to the scrap heap. Their scrap value is $3,700,000.

ATOMIC POTENTIALITIES

Nuclear Fission Has Now Opened New Fields in Scientific Research

BY ALLEN GOLDFIN
Central Press Staff Writer

OUT OF EVERY WAR comes progress! Though the toll is high in human lives, the feverish bent on destruction provides expensive far-reaching experimentation which otherwise would take many years.

And so, the outstanding weapon of destruction, the atomic bomb, at the same time, has become the greatest white hope of the world's scientists, providing them the means of breaching hitherto impossible barriers and penetrating the very secret of life itself.

For instance, Mr. Gustav Egloff, president of the American Institute of Chemists, declares it is not unreasonable to expect that atomic energy can become a practical source of power for industry within 20 years. However, with the abundance of natural power, atomic energy may be used only where natural resources are distant from a power supply. Thus, large generating plants could be constructed in desert areas, or in the Arctic, if such developments would increase the world's wealth. Although it has been suggested that atomic energy may some day power battleships, planes and giant machines, the limited available supply of fission material makes it imperative that uranium be limited to extraordinary uses.

New Elements

Already, scientists have isolated and identified more than 150 radioactive substances not previously known, as the fission fragments of Uranium 235. Among the fragments they have found two of the missing elements, 43 and 61, now known as mendelevium and ununium, named after the Mendeleev Periodic Table of Elements, respectively. Dramatic research, of interest to all mankind, is being pushed into the mysteries of disease and the unknown processes of life. The factor of utmost significance is the ability to liberate limitless amounts of neutrons. And by so

Important in Studying Disease

Important as this is, more important is the use of the radioactive elements to study the cause of the disease. By incorporating minute amounts of the easily distinguished atoms into food molecules, it becomes possible to trace their course through the body and through living plants. Thus, we can study metabolism, which is but a synonym for life. Comparing the metabolisms of a well body with that of a diseased one, it becomes possible to determine what factors cause the growth and spread of disease and how it can be prevented or corrected.

This could be accomplished not only with cancer but with all other diseases, for metabolism is the foundation of every process in the body, good and bad.

Another vista is equally alluring. Hitherto, known power has been unable to lift machines above the earth's gravitational pull. But, with atomic fuel, the energy is provided to get beyond the earth's field of gravity, opening the possibility of sending a space ship to Mars or to the Moon.

From the hellish flames of World War II there has risen a veritable Phoenix of life.

THE DESTRUCTION OF HIROSHIMA AND NAGASAKI

On the morning of August 5, 1945, the American Superfortress Enola Gay flew in from Japan's Inland Sea and circled over the Island of Honshu. The plane's pilot was Col. Paul

W. Tibbitt Jr., of Miami, Fla., the bombardier was Major Thomas W. Ferebee of Mocksville, Tibbitt had selected Hiroshima for doom, not only because it was a military center and a port, but "when we made the landfall, it appeared there would be no opposition and conditions were clear."

Suddenly the bomb was dropped. A moment later they saw a blast such as had never before been seen. White smoke leaped up on a mushroom stem to 20,000 feet. The top of the cloud structure seemed to break off at the stem and form again and from this stemmed another. Hiroshima had vanished. A few minutes before, a city had been there. Only a few large buildings remained.

Seventy-five hours after Hiroshima, a second bomb was dropped upon Nagasaki, ship-building port and industrial center. This time a different type was used. It destroyed a square mile of territory, or thirty percent of the Japanese city.

New Elements

Already, scientists have isolated and identified more than 150 radioactive substances not previously known, as the fission fragments of Uranium 235. Among the fragments they have found two of the missing elements, 43 and 61, now known as mendelevium and illium, named after the Masurium Lakes in former East Prussia and the State of Illinois, respectively.

Dramatic research, of interest to all mankind, is being pushed into the mysteries of disease and the unknown processes of life. The factor of utmost significance is the ability to liberate limitless amounts of neutrons. And by so doing, elements with affinities for particular organs of the body can be made radioactive and used for treating diseases of those organs.

Feeding small amounts of these radioactive elements into the body allows treatment of cancer of the thyroid, of the bone and of leukemia—a form of cancer of the white blood cells. It is emphasized that at this time, the new treatments show only promise in arresting the growth and are not considered in any way a cure of cancer in general.

Important in Studying Disease

Important as this is, more important is the use of the radioactive elements to study the cause of the disease. By incorporating minute amounts of the easily distinguished atoms into food molecules, it becomes possible to trace their course through the body and through living plants. Thus, we can study metabolism, which is but a synonym for life. Comparing the metabolisms of a well body with that of a diseased one, it becomes possible to determine what factors cause the growth and spread of disease and how it can be prevented or corrected.

This could be accomplished not only with cancer but with all other diseases, for metabolism is the foundation of every process in the body, good and bad.

Another vista is equally alluring. Hitherto, known power has been unable to lift machines above the earth's gravitational pull. But, with atomic fuel, the energy is provided to get beyond the earth's field of gravity, opening the possibility of sending a space ship to Mars or to the Moon.

From the hellish flames of World War II there has risen a veritable Phoenix of life.

DISCIPLINING THE COURT

IF the feud in the Supreme Court got to the point of requiring such action, the colleagues of the judge at fault would probably ask him to resign. At least twice in the court's history this has been done, both times to get rid of senile judges.

Robert C. Grier of Pennsylvania, appointed in 1846, was still serving 24 years later when he was 76. He had then become so confused in his mental processes that his fellows could put up with it no longer, and waiting upon him, obtained his resignation. One of the committee was Justice Stephen J. Field of California, who in 1897 had to be forced off the bench in like manner.

While a judge does not have to resign because his associates ask him to do so, few could withstand the ostracism that would follow failure to comply.

The pension provision which permits a Supreme Court justice to retire with pay any time after the age of seventy was a wise measure. Judges of the high court need no longer be tempted into senile, tenure for lack of the means of subsistence. Some men in all ranks of life are adequate craftsmen at 80, but others should retire long before that. In such public service as this, decent provision for the declining years is important.

FORBIDDEN FRUIT

AUTHOR of a widely read biography, Fawn M. Brodie has been excommunicated from her church because of the book. She was a member of the Latter Day Saints the Mormon church, and her book, entitled "No Man Knows My Name", tells of the life of Mormon-founder Joseph Smith. News of the church action comes from Salt Lake City without explanation. The author may lose her church membership, but she will gain readers. Human nature is such that censorship of any kind adds attractiveness. Let a play or a motion picture be banned by officials, a book be put on the locked shelves of libraries, and immediately everyone clamors for it. It will be so with Miss Brodie's book. People are going to wonder what could be in it to so displease her church elders. They will read the book to find out.

VETERANS AND SHOPS

VETERANS are interested in household appliance and radio shops. The U. S. department of Commerce, studying 7,000 inquiries from former service men, has found that almost half of them want to become retailers in these two lines. Most of the rest were interested in wholesaling and manufacturing while the smallest group wanted to go into building and transportation.

Can it be that household appliances and radios symbolized home to the serviceman on faraway oceans and battlefields? Or was it that his wife's letters made him conscious of a great demand for radios and appliances? Now that he's back, these enterprises look mighty good to him.

This country is filling up with the silver trophies known as "loving cups." And now why not go ahead and civilize the world by introduction of such love tokens?

Inside WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON—The political career of Claire Booth Luce, representative from Connecticut, is always tea-table gossip in Washington. Her announced determination to retire, unaccompanied by the usual quips which brought a bit of theatrical Broadway to the House chamber, has never been satisfactorily explained to the cynics who infest this capital.

Perhaps she has given an answer, privately, when pressed, that will convince them. If so, it demonstrates a wisely devotion which should be a warning to all career women. "If you must know," she said to a persistent questioner, "it's because I've already spent four of the best years of my husband's life here in Washington."

SENATE appropriations committee action in failing to approve a $7,500,000 appropriation for the construction of power transmission lines may revive Speaker Sam Rayburn's demands for an investigation by the House of utility lobbying.

The House committee cut the appropriation in half before reporting the bill to the lower chamber. Rayburn, from the floor, denounced utility lobbying and threatened an investigation. The full sum was restored. When the bill went to the Senate the committee cut the sum out entirely.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

CHICAGO, June 22—Someone made a mistake in inducing the Methodist bishop of New York and the Lutheran churches out here to seek recall of Myron Taylor from the Vatican. The reason President Truman stood by his assignment was this (which he could not, or did not say):

The Vatican has the best listening post in Europe. Mr. Taylor is an Episcopalian. I think, although Who's Who does not list his religion, while Mr. Truman is a Baptist. To suspect they might be influenced by Catholicism would be to place a religious charge against them. There is nothing religious about their placing of Taylor. This government is looking for information. Indeed to some European countries which we have not recognized, like Poland, the information picked up around the Vatican fills a void otherwise nearly complete.

The matter has assumed some importance because it projects a split in the Christian front around the world at a time when the foreign ministers of the big four (Churchill calls it the big two and a half) are meeting in Paris. Up to then, it had been popularly assumed the Federal Council of Churches was so near to the Vatican in foreign policy that no divergence lay between their common desire to resist atheism, or statism, or whatever communism may be called currently in your area—and indeed it still is, although the protests of the Methodists' bishop and the Lutheran churches raises some question at the wrong time, for their own best interests, their freedom of religion and their democracies, which are defended by the Vatican singlehanded in many an European nation.

Now Taylor is not an ambassador. We have not recognized the Vatican state, a tiny acreage of less than 16/100th of a mile. Under the Lateran treaty a state secretary has been created there and the pope is the religious (mind you not the state) head of Catholics throughout the world, of whom there are nearly 25,000,000 in the United States (slightly less than a fifth of the population, but five times stronger than CIO claims to be).

Therefore when Methodist bishop Oxnham, offers the excuse that "Cardinal Spellman knows the Roman Catholic church does not believe in separation of church and state" he is wrong in current fact, no matter how he might stand in ancient theory. The only big four nation having full coordination of church and state is Soviet Russia. There both Methodism and Lutheranism are practically extinct although the Kremlin (Stalin) turns the Greek orthodox church on and off as if it was being run as a political adjunct. In England, I believe some taxes yet are paid the clergy of the Episcopal church. In Spain and Argentina with which the Russians shrewdly, or cutely resumed trade the other day just to show us where we stand, the Catholics have no taxes, but generally sympathize with the government as they do in this country (in Spain and Argentina perhaps they propagandize more for it as they have been accused of doing by the Communists, but Catholics have no real union of church and state anywhere.)

The nearest thing to Church and state we have had in this country was the Methodist board of prohibition, public morals and something else, which reigned over the president and congress in the prohibition era, through its Bishop Cannon, in quite an effective way. It directed appointments and legislation.

Presumably in compromise the $3,750,000 would be restored in conference.

However, Rayburn is in such a fighting mood about the issue that he may seek an investigation. It is to be recalled that Rayburn, then head of the House interstate commerce committee, led the fight for the Utility Holding Company act, recently sustained by the supreme court. That fight also led to an investigation of lobbying under the then Senator Hugo L. Black.

HERBERT HOOVER'S proposal that Russia provide 500,000 tons of grain for nearby European countries and a like amount to Manchurian provinces and Korea is known to have struck a responsive chord in the Agriculture department.

Secretary of Agriculture Anderson feels that such deliveries of grain by the Soviet Union would be in the interests of orderly world grain shipments for famine relief. He also feels that Russian aid would do away with the necessity of the U. S. shipping grain across the seas to some foreign countries.

Anderson and other top food experts of the Administration are worried also by the problem of distance shipments in the use of Australian grain in India. The U. S. officials feel that the movement of Australian grain to India requires too long a haul.

Availability of Russian grain was made apparent by the Soviet shipments of wheat to France. Deliveries to neighboring countries by Russia are advocated to simplify the world's famine delivery problem.

Rheumatic Heart Disease—Deceptively Mild at Start

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

STRANGELY enough, rheumatic heart disease, dreaded everywhere as a killer and heart-crippler of children, begins its attack with deceptive mildness. There is nothing to alarm or to put the family of the victim on guard, simply a slight infection, usually of the throat, which is apparently over and done with in a few days.

But recovery is apparent only, because after a week or two, this wolf in sheep's clothing pounces in dead earnest, causing acute rheumatic fever, with swelling of the joints, pain, fatigue, loss of weight, poor appetite and, in all-too-many instances, permanent damage to the heart.

Gathers Strength

Just why this disease should start off so innocently, lie quiet in the body for seven to fourteen days, as if gathering strength, and then spring with explosive violence, is not known, and this is only a part of its mystery. Even its cause is uncertain though, according to Dr. Arnold G. Wedum of Denver, a germ called the beta hemolytic streptococcus seems definitely associated with rheumatic fever.

It's a common-enough germ. Many people harbor it with no more than a slight inflammation of the throat and yet, in certain individuals, it seems to bring about this delayed and disastrous illness.

Why? Well, that's still another unanswered question, but Dr. Wedum and most other experts on the subject believe that certain people may be oversensitive to this particular germ or to some substance formed by the germ after it enters the body.

It has been found that in children with rheumatic infection there is a one out of two chances that the disorder will recur after a streptococcal infection of the throat. A cold may cause a recurrence in one out of three instances. Hence, the prevention of colds among rheumatic children is extremely important.

It has been found that this possibility can be done by giving a small dose of one of the sulfonamide drugs daily. Of course, this should be done only under the directions of the physician. It has also been noted that recurrent attacks may follow removal of the tonsils or the appendix, or even after small-pox vaccination.

There is also some evidence that the disease tends to run in families, according to Dr. Wedum. For this reason he thinks it important that the brothers and sisters of patients be examined regularly several times a year so that early signs of rheumatic fever may be detected and proper treatment carried out.

Rheumatic fever starts most often at about the age of seven. Since persons who live in a warm, dry climate tend to have fewer respiratory infections, the rheumatic fever patient may get along better in such surroundings.

Rheumatic fever is an important cause of death among youngsters from 5 to 19 years of age, fourth most important in the country. Even though in the present state of medical knowledge, it is impossible to prevent its occurrence, many of these lives can still be saved by early treatment and good after-care under the supervision of a doctor.

CHAPTER THIRTY

IT WAS a mistake to let the senator's daughter get started. Corbett said desperately. "Sh... Shut up for a while. I want to hear what your papa's saying."

She pouted again. "Silly, that isn't my daddy. That's Mr. Raummeyer, the newspaper publisher. He's just an old scoundrel. You wouldn't want to listen to him."

Now that she put it that way, he did, yet without curiosity, merely to have a pretext to get rid of the clack of her voice. Raummeyer had said very little, just: "Go on, Mr. Voorhees, and clipped his words off so that they seemed even less than they were. Old Mr. Voorhees went on in his senile treble: "Well, Ray Parsons called me—he's our executive vice-president—he felt he wanted me to have the last word. They're meeting on Wednesday. They wanted me there. You can see what it means for us to give in. It would be the end. Voorhees Brass Castings will no longer be run by its board of directors, its voting stockholders. It will be run by a Communist union."

A stinging smile raised Raummeyer's toothbrush mustache. "Or by the Army," he said.

Purple spread over old Voorhees' face. "But they can't do that! Not in my country." He looked at the senator, his eyes filled with desperate dread.

Pat Hastings pawed Corbett's shoulder. "You don't want to listen to that," she persisted. He put his hand over hers. "Be a good girl," he said. "And keep quiet."

"We've seen it coming," Raummeyer said. "Every step of the way. I knew the moment we entered this war, liberty was dead on this continent."

"That's it," old Voorhees quavered. "They're taking our country away from us. Why, only this day on this train, I had an experience I shall never forget..."

Corbett saw the blue-eyed Englishwoman turn away from the senator's wife, flush, bite her lips.

"You Raummeyer said coldly. "I'm interested in the other. The labor board matter. If we can help you at all, why we will. We owe it to our readers to present all the facts."

Senator Hastings sipped at his highball. "You didn't give me a break—not much of a break when I made my address on the servicemen's pay." He glanced at Corbett over the top of his glasses.

"We did our best. You know our policy. Raids on the treasury, more loads on the taxpayer's back. This futile adventure is costing enough..." And it's nothing, it's nothing at all to what will come after. When we're flooded with goods from Russian slave labor. When our own men come back, infected with Bolshevism!" He turned, looked at Corbett and scowled—"Clamoring for jobs that just don't exist."

"Filled up with refugees," the senator quickly put in. "That's what I've told them time and again on the floor. You'll find my remarks in the Record." Why...

this country's just running with foreigners, taking the jobs that belong to our boys. Why, we're sending tractors to Europe—to Europe, mind you—while our farmers can't get what they need. We'll have trouble enough, just mark my words."

"Oh, I know." Old Voorhees trembled as he talked. "I spoke with some friends in Palm Beach. Very wise men, men of foresight and vision. They're getting ready. They're training for after."

Hastings looked at Corbett again. There was a hint of discomfort in his face. He pressed Voorhees' arm, whispered in his ear. The old man glanced quickly up, toward the soldier, and then, with tremendous appeal, toward Senator Hastings. It was perfectly plain that all three of the men were wishing that Corbett would finish his drink and get out.

He looked into his glass. There wasn't much more than melted ice. But the malice of stubbornness made him pretend he had a long way to go in the highball. He leaned back in the chair, stretched his legs. Pat Hastings said, "That's better. Now, you listen to me."

But he couldn't because her old man had started an oration, and the senator's voice was used to large halls. He was staring at Corbett; the speech was plainly directed at him. "Some star-gazers are telling you about the world they're going to make. Well, I'm a practical man. I'm one of those old-fashioned, practical men. I believe in letting nature take its own course until our boys come home. I know what they want. They've written to me. They've told me what they want. They want to find Uncle Sam in his swallow-tail coat, his tall hat, just the same as he was... Leave him be. That's what I say. Leave him be."

Pat whispered: "For Pete's sake, if somebody doesn't stop dad, he'll go on all night."

"I want prosperity. I want lasting prosperity. Not meddling and monkeying. I believe in taking care of the sick and distressed in my own home before taking care of any other country on the face of the earth. And I want peace, above all things I want peace. My heart is with all the suffering and sorrowing mothers of the world. My heart goes out to them because a mother is the noblest thing God ever created." He bowed his head in his wife's direction.

It sounded like double-talk. Through the alcohol fuzzi, it even seemed mildly amusing, pleasantly soporific. Corbett yawned. The girl next to him grimaced. "Is that all I get for giving you Scotch?"

He roused himself, decided the time had come to be generous. He stroked her hand. "You're a sweet kid," and after a moment: "Think you could manage a refill?"

"Oh, daddy'd—"

"He wouldn't mind. You know he wouldn't. I'm a vote, a potential vote. Take care of the sick and distressed."

"Are you sick?"

"Not so you'd notice it, darling... Come, come, be a good kid."

She ruffled his hair before she took his glass and went up to the tray with the bottles. "Just one little one, daddy," he heard her say. "Just one more. Oh, be nice!" and then the door of the car swung back with a bang.

Kalchis stood framed in the doorway, bracing himself by his lean, wiry hands, blinking eyes bloodshot from sleep. "Sa-a-ay, it looks like a pa-a-rt-y."

Every face in the car turned toward him. There was outrage and shock and, growing slowly, unmistakable fear, as though all their vague dreads and their hates were made immediate and personal in this one shabby stranger.

Kalchis seemed not to have noticed. He entered the car, teetered a moment, getting his balance, deciding which seat to take. He sat down next to Corbett.

Pat Hastings gave Corbett his glass without speaking. She slid into her chair, tucked her short skirt over her kneecaps.

Kalchis touched Corbett's sleeve. "I see you take. Crashed the party. What does a guy have to do to get one of those?"

Voorhees clutched the arms of his chair and pulled himself out. "I shall retire," he said primly. "Mrs. Forsythe, don't you think you had better?" His eyes were on Kalchis.

The horseplayer lolled back in his chair. "Don't let me chase you," he drawled amiably.

The Englishwoman stood. "But, of course. If you think our berths are made up." She blushed as she said it.

Corbett saw the blonde in the fox glance at her boldly and snicker.

Voorhees crooked his arm. Mrs. Forsythe held it tightly while they swayed in the aisle for good nights. "We'll continue our talk tomorrow, I hope," Voorhees said. "Shall I see you gentlemen at breakfast?"

"Not me." The senator tamped his cigar on the ash stand. "I get off early. Washington. Back to work. Margie and Pat stay on to New York." He arched his spine. "Girls, what do you say we turn in? I've had a tough day."

He picked up his pinch bottle and bourbon, put one under each arm. "Pat, leave that soldier alone. You've got him drunk."

When they had gone, Raummeyer, rising reluctantly with them, the lady in fox turned to her companion. "What some women will do!" She said crisply. "Did you see what that was?"

That dame with the baby blue eyes. To look at her, you'd think she didn't know which end was up. She didn't know that old guy, right on this train. The rouged bow of her lips slipped sideways with contempt. "I hear she has a husband in England. They come over here—"

"She waved her wrist. The wall bracket sent its light down, drove out a shower of sparks from her bracelet.

The horseplayer leaned back in his chair, knees crossed and hands folded, smiling benignly at her and the diamonds.

Corbett set his glass down on the floor and went out of the car.

STARS SAY—

For Saturday, June 22

AFFAIRS of major and far-reaching importance are under planetary stimuli to concentrate all the abilities and resources of fundamental significance in shaping the future, its happiness, prosperity and security. Shrewd endeavor, sound tactics and constructive ability, might bring lasting results.

However, there are hidden perils or subtle undercurrents that might defeat the best of plans and objectives. Deceit, treachery and fraud are seen. Offsetting, there is much in the way of charm, glamor and romance.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may be torn between two opposing forces, one in the matter of concentrating the energies on hard work, shrewd insight and studied performance in putting the future safety, security, happiness and success on a firm and lasting basis.

The other offers lures of "parties," celebrations, social functions and domestic and romantic engagements. Charm, lure, beauty and love may prove overpowering to sturdy intentions.

A child born on this day may have many solid, sterling and enduring faculties and traits and will not be lacking in the finer forces of beauties, love and domesticity.

For Sunday, June 23

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds excellent auguries for the pursuit of culture, beauty, all sorts of intellectual, scientific and artistic developments, with openings for lucrative and enjoyable expression, at home, in business and in affairs generally.

It is a time for aiming high in spiritual unfolding and ideals as well as in emotional gratifications. Most propitious for study and introspection.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is are assured a year of great happiness, progress and prosperity, with all the talents and energies centered in the quest of advanced ideals, plans and objectives. Creative, scientific and spiritual faculties and forces are under excellent pressure for exceptional or unique expression.

BOTH CAN READ LEADS

READING the message of the opening lead is the key to declaring the play of many a contract. By applying the Rule of Eleven, he can often tell definitely that the lead is not a fourth-best and therefore is probably the top of a short suit. But while the declarer is doing that, the partner of the opening certainly should be doing likewise. In fact, the expectation that he will do so is the sole reason why the leader picks his opening card according to established rule. His purpose is to enable his partner to get the maximum results from his own cards and help the leader do the maximum with his.

At several tables of a duplicate, the bidding went as shown, and a number of the West players led the club 6 to try to hit their partner's strength. In one case, the 4 was played from dummy. East using the K and returning the 7. That declarer took the A, then the Q. Wanting to reach his own hand, he led toward the spade Q, but the K killed it and a heart was returned. It requires no imagination to see how he then got lambasted, never getting into his own hand.

Another declarer was pretty slick. Reading the 6 as probably not a fourth-best, he put in the dummy's Q and Mr. Careless East took it, then returned the 7 to the A. South came to his own hand with the club 4 to the J, then led a diamond and finessed the 10. He laid down the A, then gave West a diamond. He therefore scored four tricks in diamonds, three in clubs and the two major aces for game.

Where another declarer tried the club Q on the first trick, canny East played low. He saw it was impossible for the 6 to be a fourth-best, as there were not three higher cards out. By doing that, he blocked South from ever getting into his own hand and consequently set the contract.

Perhaps she has given an answer, privately, when pressed, that will convince them. If so, it demonstrates a widely devotion which should be a warning to all career women. "If you must know," she said to a persistent questioner, "it's because I've already spent four of the best years of my husband's life here in Washington."

● SENATE appropriations committee action in failing to approve a $7,500,000 appropriation for the construction of power transmission lines may revive Speaker Sam Rayburn's demands for an investigation by the House of utility lobbying.

The House committee cut the appropriation in half before reporting the bill to the lower chamber. Rayburn, from the floor, denounced utility lobbying and threatened an investigation. The full sun was restored. When the bill went to the Senate the committee cut the sum out entirely.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

CHICAGO, June 22—Someone made a mistake in inducing the Methodist bishop of New York and the Lutheran churches out here to seek recall of Myron Taylor from the Vatican. The reason President Truman stood by his assignment was this (which he could not, or did not say):

The Vatican has the best listening post in Europe. Mr. Taylor is an Episcopalian. I think, although Who's Who does not list his religion, while Mr. Truman is a Baptist. To suspect they might be influenced by Catholicism would be to place a religious charge against them. There is nothing religious about their placing of Taylor. This government is looking for information. Indeed to some European countries which we have not recognized, like Poland, the information picked up around the Vatican fills a void otherwise nearly complete.

The matter has assumed some importance because it projects a split in the Christian front around the world at a time when the foreign ministers of the big four (Churchill calls it the big two and a half) are meeting in Paris. Up to then, it had been popularly assumed the Federal Council of Churches was so near to the Vatican in foreign policy that no divergence lay between their common desire to resist atheism, or stateism, or whatever communism may be called currently in your area—and indeed it still is, although the protests of the Methodists' bishop and the Lutheran churches raises some question at the wrong time, for their own best interests, their freedom of religion and their democracies, which are defended by the Vatican singlehanded in many an European nation.

Now Taylor is not an ambassador. We have not recognized the Vatican state, a tiny acreage of less than 16/100th of a mile. Under the Lateran treaty a state secretary has been created there and the pope is the religious (mind you not the state) head of Catholics throughout the world, of whom there are nearly 25,000,000 in the United States (slightly less than a fifth of the population, but five times stronger than CIO claims to be).

Therefore when Methodist bishop Oxnham, offers the excuse that "Cardinal Spellman knows the Roman Catholic church does not believe in separation of church and state" he is wrong in current fact, no matter how he might stand in ancient theory. The only big four nation having full coordination of church and state is Soviet Russia. There both Methodism and Lutheranism are practically extinct although the Kremlin (Stalin) turns the Greek orthodox church on and off as if it was being run as a political adjunct. In England, I believe some taxes yet are paid the clergy of the Episcopal church. In Spain and Argentina—with which the Russians shrewdly, or cutely resumed trade the other day just to show us where we stand, the Catholics have no taxes, but generally sympathize with the government as they do in this country (in Spain and Argentina perhaps they propagandize more for it as they have been accused of doing by the Communists, but Catholics have no real union of church and state anywhere.)

The nearest thing to Church and state we have had in this country was the Methodist board of prohibition, public morals and something else, which reigned over the president and congress in the prohibition era, through its Bishop Cannon, in quite an effective way. It directed appointments and legislation.

Rheumatic Heart Disease—Deceptively Mild at Start

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

STRANGELY enough, rheumatic heart disease, dreaded everywhere as a killer and heart-cripper of children, begins its attack with deceptive mildness. There is nothing to alarm or to put the family of the victim on guard, simply a slight infection, usually of the throat, which is apparently over and done with in a few days.

But recovery is apparent only, because after a week or two, this wolf in sheep's clothing pounces in dead earnest, causing acute rheumatic fever, with swelling of the joints, pain, fatigue, loss of weight, poor appetite and, in all-too-many instances, permanent damage to the heart.

Gathers Strength

Just why this disease should start off so innocently, lie quiet in the body for seven to fourteen days, as if gathering strength, and then spring with explosive violence, is not known, and 'tis only a part of its mystery. Even its cause is uncertain though, according to Dr. Arnold G. Wedum of Denver, a germ called the beta hemolytic streptococcus seems definitely associated with rheumatic fever.

It's a common-enough germ. Many people harbor it with no more than a slight inflammation of the throat and yet, in certain individuals, it seems to bring about this delayed and disastrous illness.

Why? Well, that's still another unanswered question, but Dr. Wedum and most other experts on the subject believe that certain people may be oversensitive to this particular germ or to some substance formed by the germ after it enters the body.

It has been found that in children with rheumatic infection there is a one out of two chances that the disorder will recur after a streptococcal infection of the throat. A cold may cause a recurrence in one out of three instances. Hence, the prevention of colds among rheumatic children is extremely important.

It has been found that this possibility can be done by giving a small dose of one of the sulfonamide drugs daily. Of course, this should be done only under the directions of the physician. It has also been noted that recurrent attacks may follow removal of the tonsils or the appendix, or even after small-pox vaccination.

There is also some evidence that the disease tends to run in families, according to Dr. Wedum. For this reason he thinks it important that the brothers and sisters of patients be examined regularly several times a year so that early signs of rheumatic fever may be detected and proper treatment carried out.

Rheumatic fever starts most often at about the age of seven. Since persons who live in a warm, dry climate tend to have fewer respiratory infections, the rheumatic fever patient may get along better in such surroundings.

Rheumatic fever is an important cause of death among youngsters from 5 to 19 years of age, fourth most important in the country. Even though in the present state of medical knowledge, it is impossible to prevent its occurrence, many of these lives can still be saved by early treatment and good after-care under the supervision of a doctor.

CHAPTER THIRTY

IT WAS a mistake to let the senator's daughter get started. Corbett said desperately: "Sh... Shut up for a while. I want to hear what your papa's saying."

She pouted again. "Silly, that isn't my daddy. That's Mr. Rauchmeyer, the newspaper publisher. He's just an old sourpuss. You wouldn't want to listen to him."

Now that she put it that way, he did, yet without curiosity, merely to have a pretext to get rid of the clack of her voice. Rauchmeyer had said very little, just: "Go on, Mr. Voorhees," and clipped his words off so that they seemed even less than they were.

Old Mr. Voorhees went on in his senile treble: "Well, Ray Parsons called me—he's our executive vice-president—he felt he wanted me to have the last word. They're meeting on Wednesday. They wanted me there. You can see what it means for us to give in. It would be the end. Voorhees Brass Castings will no longer be run by its board of directors, its voting stockholders. It will be run by a Communist union."

A stinging smile raised Rauchmeyer's toothbrush mustache. "Or by the Army," he said.

Purple spread over old Voorhees' face. "But they can't do that! Not in my country." He looked at the senator, his eyes filled with desperate dread.

Pat Hastings pawed Corbett's shoulder. "You don't want to listen to that," she persisted. He put his hand over hers. "Be a good girl," he said. "And keep quiet."

"We've seen it coming," Rauchmeyer said. "Every step of the way. I knew the moment we entered this war, liberty was dead on this continent."

"That's it," old Voorhees quavered. "They're taking our country away from us. Why only this day on this train. I had an experience I shall never forget..."

Corbett saw the blue-eyed Englishman turn away from the senator's wife, flush, bite her lips. "You told us about that," Rauchmeyer said coldly. "I'm interested in the other. The labor board matter. If we can help you at all, why we will. We owe it to our readers to present all the facts."

Senator Hastings sipped at his highball. "You didn't give me a break—not much of a break—when I made my address on the servicemen's pay." He glanced at Corbett over the top of his glass.

"We did our best. You know our policy. Raids on the treasury, more loads on the taxpayer's back. This futile adventure is costing enough... And it's nothing, it's nothing at all to what will come after. When we're flooded with goods from Russian slave labor. When our own men come back, infected with Bolshevism"—He turned, looked at Corbett and scowled—"Clamoring for jobs that just don't exist."

"Filled up with refugees," the senator quickly put in. "That's what I've told them time and again on the floor (You'll find my remarks in the Record.) Why, I this country's just running with foreigners, taking the jobs that belong to our boys. Why, we're sending tractors to Europe—to Europe, mind you—while our farmers can't get what they need. We'll have trouble enough, just mark my words."

"Oh, I know," Old Voorhees trembled as he talked. "I spoke with some friends in Palm Beach. Very wise men, men of foresight and vision. They're getting ready. They're training for after."

Hastings looked at Corbett again. There was a hint of discomfort in his face. He pressed Voorhees' arm, whispered in his ear. The old man glanced quickly up, toward the soldier, and then, with tremulous appeal, toward Senator Hastings. It was perfectly plain that all three of the men were wishing that Corbett would finish his drink and get out.

He looked into his glass. There wasn't much more than melted ice. But the malice of stubbornness made him pretend he had a long way to go in the highball. He leaned back in the chair, stretched his legs. Pat Hastings said, "That's better. Now, you listen to me."

But he couldn't because her old man had started an oration, and the senator's voice was used to large halls. He was taring at Corbett; the speech was plainly directed at him. "Some star-gazers are telling you about the world they're going to make. Well, I'm a practical man. I'm one of those old-fashioned, practical men. I believe in letting nature take its own course until our boys come home. I know what they want. They've written to me. They've told me what they want. They want to see Uncle Sam in his swallow-tail coat, his tall hat, just the same as he was... Leave him be. That's what I say. Leave him be."

Pat whispered: "For Pete's sake, if somebody doesn't stop dad, he'll go on all night." "I want prosperity. I want lasting prosperity. I believe in meddling and tinkering. I believe in taking care of the sick and distressed in my own home before taking care of any other country on the face of the earth. And I want peace, above all things I want peace. My heart is with all the suffering and sorrowing mothers of the world. My heart goes out to them because a mother is the noblest thing God ever created." He bowed his head in his wife's direction.

It sounded like double-talk. Through the alcohol fuzzi, it even seemed mildly amusing, pleasantly soporific. Corbett yawned. The girl next to him grimaced. "Is that all I get for giving you Scotch?"

He roused himself, decided the time had come to be generous. He stroked her hand. "You're a sweet kid," and after a moment: "Think you could manage a refill?" "Oh, daddy?"

"He wouldn't mind. You know he wouldn't. I'm a vote, a potential vote. Take care of the sick and distressed."

"Are you sick?" "Not so you'd notice it, darling... Come, come, be a good kid."

She ruffled his hair before she took his glass and went up to the tray with the bottles. "Just one little one, daddy," he heard her say. "Just one more. Oh, be nice!" and then the door of the car swung back with a bang.

Kalchis stood framed in the doorway, bracing himself by his lean, wiry hands, blinking eyes bloodshot from sleep. "Sa-a-y, it looks like a pa-a-ty."

Every face in the car turned toward him. There was outrage and shock and, growing slowly, unmistakable fear, as though all their vague dreads and their hates were made immediate and personal in this one shabby stranger. Kalchis seemed not to have noticed. He entered the car, teetered a moment, getting his balance, deciding which seat to take. He sat down next to Corbett.

Pat Hastings gave Corbett his glass without speaking. She slid into her chair, tucked her short skirt over her kneecaps. Kalchis touched Corbett's sleeve. "I see you rate. Crashed the party. What does a guy have to do to get one of those?"

Voorhees clutched the arms of his chair and pulled himself out. "I shall retire," he said primly. "Mrs. Forsythe, don't you think you had better?" His eyes were on Kalchis.

The horseplayer lolled back in his chair. "Don't let me chase you," he drawled amiably. The Englishwoman stood. "But, of course. If you think our berths are made up. She blushed as she said it."

Corbett saw the blonde in the fox glance at her boldly and smicker.

Voorhees crooked his arm. Mrs. Forsythe held it tightly while they swayed in the aisle for good night. "We'll continue our talk tomorrow, I hope," Voorhees said. "Shall I see you gentlemen at breakfast?"

"Not me." The senator tamped his cigar on the ash stand. "I get off early. Washington. Back to work. Margie and Pat stay on to New York." He arched his spine. "Girls, what do you say we turn in? I've had a tough day." He picked up his pinch bottle and bourbon, put one under each arm. "Pat, leave that soldier alone. You've got him drunk."

When they had gone, Rauchmeyer, rising reluctantly with them, the lady in fox turned to her companion. "What some women will do!" She said crisply. "Did you see what that was?"

That dame with the baby blue eyes. To look at her, you'd think she didn't know which end was up. She picked up that old guy, right on this train." The rouged bow of her lips slipped sideways with contempt. "I hear she has a husband in England. They come over here—." She waved her wrist. The wall bracket sent its light down, drove out a shower of sparks from her bracelet.

The horseplayer leaned back in his chair, knees crossed and hands folded, smiling benignly at her and the diamonds. Corbett set his glass down on the floor and went out of the car. (To Be Continued)

STARS SAY—

For Saturday, June 22

AFFAIRS of major and far-reaching importance are under planetary stimuli to concentrate all the abilities and resources of fundamental significance in shaping the future, its happiness, prosperity and security. Shrewd endeavor, sound tactics and constructive ability, might bring lasting results.

However, there are hidden perils or subtle undercurrents that might defeat the best of plans and objectives. Deceit, treachery and fraud are seen. Offsetting, there is much in the way of charm, glamor and romance.

If It Is Your Birthday Those whose birthday it is may be torn between two opposing forces, one in the matter of concentrating the energies on hard work, shrewd insight and studied performance in putting the future safety, security, happiness and success on a firm and lasting basis.

The other offers lures of "parties," celebrations, social functions and domestic and romantic engagements. Charm, lure, beauty and love may prove overpowering to sturdy intentions.

A child born on this day may have many solid, sterling and enduring faculties and traits and will not be lacking in the finer forces of beauties, love and domesticity.

For Sunday, June 23

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds excellent auguries for the pursuit of culture, beauty, all sorts of intellectual, scientific and artistic developments, with openings for lucrative and enjoyable expression, at home, in business and in affairs generally.

It is a time for aiming high in spiritual unfolding and ideals as well as in emotional gratifications. Most propitious for study and introspection.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is are assured a year of great happiness, progress and prosperity, with all the talents and energies centered in the quest of advanced ideals, plans and objectives. ### BOTH CAN READ LEADS

READING the message of the opening lead is the key to declarer's play of many a contract. By applying the Rule of Eleven, he can often tell definitely that the lead is not a fourth-best and therefore is probably the top of a short suit. But while the declarer is doing that, the partner of the opening certainly should be doing likewise. In fact, the expectation that he will do so is the sole reason why the leader picks his opening card according to established rule. His purpose is to enable his partner to get the maximum results from his own cards and help the leader do the maximum with his.

At several tables of a duplicate, the bidding went as shown, and a number of the West players led the club 6 to try to hit their partner's strength. In one case, the 4 was played from dummy. East using the K and returning the 7. That declarer took the A, then the Q. Wanting to reach his own hand, he led toward the spade Q, but the K killed it and a heart was returned. It requires no imagination to see how he then got lambasted, never getting into his own hand.

Another declarer was pretty slick. Reading the 6 as probably not a fourth-best, he put in the dummy Q and Mr. Careless East took it, then returned the 7 to the A. South came to his own hand with the club 4 to the J, then led a diamond and finessed the 10. He laid down the A, then gave West a diamond. He therefore scored four tricks in diamonds, three in clubs and the two major aces for game.

Where another declarer tried the club Q on the first trick, canny East played low. He saw it was impossible for the 6 to be a fourth-best, as there were not three higher cards out. By doing that, he blocked South from ever getting into his own hand and consequently set the contract.

The Rev. George L. Troutman

'THE SECRET OF SUCCESS' TO BE SERMON SUBJECT

Beginning with a dissertation on Psalm 1, the Rev. Carl L. Kennedy will preach a series of "Sermons on the Psalms" throughout the remainder of June and the month of July.

Sunday morning's sermon theme in the Presbyterian church will be "The Secret of Success" and is based on the text found in Psalm 1:3, "In whatsoever he doeth, he shall prosper."

The Women's Chorus, under the direction of Mrs. Melvin Kiger, will sing the anthem by Mendelssohn, "Lift Thine Eyes to the Mountains" from the oratorio "Elijah."

Miss Abbe Mills Clarke will play "Pastorale" by Brewer, "Canzonetta" by d'Ambrosio, and the "Gloria" from "Twelfth Mass" by Mozart.

'TO SEE OR BE SEEN' TITLE OF SUNDAY SERMON

"To See or Be Seen With?" This question will serve as the basis for the sermon topic of the Rev. Carl L. Wilson of the First United Brethren Church in divine worship service, Sunday at 10:30 a. m.

The prelude, "Adagio" by Mendelssohn; offertory, "Menuetto" by Wagner and the postlude, "March Postlude in C" by Stults constitutes Miss Lucille Kirkwood's organ numbers.

The junior church has arranged an object lesson under the theme, "Your First Love Letter." The junior church meets in the children's chapel.

At 7:30 p. m. for the vesper hour, the Rev. Mr. Wilson will speak on the topic, "Safe in Port," with a scriptural text from Psalms 107:29-30.

CHILDREN WILL GIVE PROGRAM FOR LUTHERANS

At the morning worship period Sunday at Trinity Lutheran church the 260 children of the 1946 Bible school will present the program. Songs, Bible drills and contest demonstrating the various accomplishments of the three weeks course will be presented.

A biblical play, "The Boy Mark," will be given under the direction of Mrs. Harold Anderson.

Others present included Mrs. Eleanor Dunlap, Mrs. Ned Plum, Mrs. Jean Lyle, Mrs. Ned Harden, Mrs. John Moore, Mrs. Henry Helwegen, Mrs. Robert Piekens, Mrs. William Monger, Miss Jane Mader, Mrs. David Harman, and Mrs. P. C. Routzahn.

Mrs. Melvin Yates, Mrs. Robert Smith, Mrs. Orsen Patrick, Mrs. Loren Pace, Mrs. David Jackson, Mrs. George Roth, Mrs. William Steele, Miss Marjorie Mader, Mrs. Robert Hedges, Mrs. Emerson Spicer, Mrs. Paul Rodenfels, Miss Mary Katherine May and Mrs. Francis Tilton.

Following the luncheon, the group went to the Grant home, North Washington street, where the remainder of the afternoon was spent in playing bridge.

Union Guild Has Meeting At Home Of Mrs. Butts

Union Guild members met Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Henry Butts, near Williamsport, with Mrs. Herbert Thomas as assistant hostess.

Twelve members and several guests were present and the meeting opened with group singing of "My Faith Looks Up To Thee." Following the responsive reading of the Lord's prayer was recited and a silent prayer was offered for the members of the Schooley family who recently suffered such a great tragedy.

"I Would Be True" was sung by the group. Mrs. Fred Riggins was accepted as a new member of the group.

July 10 has been chosen as the date for the next meeting which will be held at the home of Mrs. Walter Bumgarner, near Washington C. H., with Mrs. Lawrence Goodman as assistant hostess.

Mrs. O. A. Lanman will lead the devotionals at the July meeting. The meeting was closed by group singing of "Blest Be The Tie That Binds" and the benediction.

For the program readings were offered by Mrs. Sherman Campbell, Mrs. Austin Hoover, Mrs. Lanman and Mrs. Goodman.

Refreshments were served by the hostess.

Personals

Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Brehmer and Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Brehmer Jr., North Court street, have gone on a fishing trip to Lake Winnebago, Minnesota.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Franklin Bell and family, Kings Mills, are spending the week at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Brehmer, North Court street.

The Rev. Carl L. Wilson, pastor of the First United Brethren church, and Mrs. Wilson, East Main street, will leave Monday for San Diego, California, where they will visit friends.

Mrs. Ralph Long, East Franklin street, has left for Wellston where she will visit with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Bowers and family.

John Magill and his two sons, Charles and Roger, Seyfert avenue, have returned home following a vacation trip to Arizona, Colorado, and New Mexico. While in Phoenix, Ariz., they visited with Mr. Magill's mother, Mrs. W. W. Magill. While on the trip they visited many points of interest including the Grand Canyon.

Simple Cakes Style Now

In times like these, many brides think best to use a simple June Bride's Cake instead of the traditional rich fruit cake, highly ornamented.

Geraldine Yunk Is the Bride Of Robert Campbell

Mrs. Gertrude Yunk, Long Beach, California, announces the marriage of her daughter, Miss Geraldine, to Robert G. Campbell, son of Mrs. Florence T. Campbell, East Main street, and the late J. Wiley Campbell.

The double ring ceremony was solemnized by the Rev. Jesse L. Murrel in the Methodist church, Covington, Kentucky, on March 21.

Mrs. Campbell is a graduate of Atascadero high school and was formerly associated with the Atascadero branch of the Bank of America.

Mr. Campbell is a graduate of Atlanta high school and was recently discharged after serving for 52 months in the Army. He was formerly employed for four years as a deputy recorder in the Pickaway County Court house.

Mrs. Campbell is now attending Ohio State University's College of Commerce.

GOP Boosters Meet With Mrs. Straley

Mrs. John Straley, Logan street, entertained members of the GOP Boosters club, Thursday.

Mrs. B. M. Wignell, vice president, was in charge of the meeting which opened with the pledge of allegiance to the flag led by Mrs. Harry A. Styers Jr.

The topic of discussion was, "Sharing the Atomic Secrets with the Rest of the World."

A regular "sing time" period followed.

Contests were held and prizes awarded to Mrs. Carlton Thomas, Miss Lenore Hundley and Mrs. Roy Dumm.

Mrs. Marion I. Smith who has recently come to this country from England was accepted as a new member.

At the close of the evening the hostess served refreshments. Plans for the July meeting will be announced later.

Mary Lou Lake Is Honored At Picnic

Mrs. William Lake, South Court street, entertained Friday afternoon with a picnic at Ted Lewis park in honor of the fifth birthday anniversary of her daughter Mary Lou.

Fifteen little guests were present including Patty and Shirley McDaniels, Norma, Frances, and Joy Lagore, Rita, Doris, and Linda Edgington, Nancy McClarren, Dianna Starkey, Ruth Sines, Danny Edgington, Gerald Starkey, Danny Binkley and Bobby Barnhart.

Little Miss Lake received many gifts from her friends.

Mrs. Lake was assisted by Mrs. M. L. Binkley and Mrs. Lloyd Edgington.

Altar Bound

MICHAEL O'SHEA and Virginia Mayo, shown above in a mirthful moment at a Hollywood party, are reported to be altar bound in the near future. (International)

Mrs. John Riggins Hostess To WSCS

Salem Womens Society of Christian Service of Mead, met Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. John Riggins, Pickaway township.

Mrs. Ross Courtright was in charge of the devotionals. The Rev. L. W. Mann, pastor of the Methodist church, Kingston, offered prayer.

After a short business session the social hour was spent in mending. The hostess assisted by Mrs. Ferry Alkire, served refreshments to the group.

The next meeting will be the annual family picnic July 21 in the grove of the Salem Methodist church, Mead. Mrs. Jesse Hildebrand, president, appointed committees to be in charge of this affair.

Mrs. Courtright, Mrs. Alkire and Mrs. Harry Sharrett will serve as the food committee. Entertainment will be planned by Mrs. Edgar Harrell and Mrs. Donald Hildebrand while Mrs. Merle McAfee and Mrs. Ralph Woolever will be in charge of the chairs and table decorations.

FELLOWSHIP TO MEET

Members of the Youth Fellowship of the Morris United Brethren church will meet Tuesday at 7:30 p. m. at the home of Miss Maxine Poling, Pickaway township.

A prize will be given to the member bringing the most cancelled sales tax stamps to this session.

'RESPONSIBILITY OF MATURITY' IS SERMON TOPIC

"Responsibility of Maturity" is the topic chosen by the Rev. Clarence Swearingen for his sermon Sunday morning in the First Methodist church.

The octet will sing two numbers, "Hear My Prayer" by James and "Let the Words of My Mouth" by Pearr.

Mrs. Erwin Leist has chosen for her organ numbers "Gloria" (from a mass in E flat) by Andrei and "The Worship of God in Nature" by Beethoven.

Church Briefs

The Youth Crusaders of the First United Brethren Church will meet at the Community House, Monday at 7:30 p. m. for the June business and social meeting. The program will be in charge of Jim Arnold, Ralph Starkey and Robert Huffer. All young people 12 to 25 years of age are invited. Refreshments will be served.

The Session of the Presbyterian Church will meet briefly following the Sunday morning worship service.

Three special services are being announced for the morning worship services at the First United Brethren Church beginning Sunday, June 30. The children of the church will present their annual Children's Day services at 10:30 a. m., June 30. The teachers and workers of the children's department will direct this program. Sunday, July 7, the Rev. O. W. Smith, pastor of the Ashville United Brethren Church, will be the guest minister. The choir under the direction of Charles Kirkpatrick and the church organist, Miss Lucille Kirkwood, will present a sacred musical program, Sunday morning, July 14. The vesper services at 7:30 p. m. will not be held these three Sundays.

Farouk's Guest

Haj AMIN EL HUSSEINI, Grand Mufti of Jerusalem whose disappearance from exile in France last month caused a world-wide sensation, has turned up as a houseguest of Egypt's King Farouk, who has advised the British government he will harbor the Mufti. He has been accused of pro-Axis sympathies, and there has been recent agitation in Jewish circles to have him stand trial as a war criminal with Nazi leaders in Nuernberg. (International)

BIRDS TROUNCE COLONELS; RACE TIGHTENS AGAIN

The first division race in the American Association tightened today as Indianapolis moved into a third place tie with Kansas City. St. Paul, idle yesterday, retained its four-game lead.

The Indians defeated the Toledo Mud Hens, 4 to 4, yesterday and Columbus trounced the Colonels, 4 to 1, in the only games scheduled. Louisville sent three righthanders against Columbus and they granted 10 hits, enough for a four run victory for the seventh place Red Birds. Bill Clemensen went the route for the Birds and gave up only five hits. The Colonels' lone tally came in the sixth. Columbus took advantage of four Louisville errors to score twice in the fourth and twice in the sixth. George Toolson was charged with the loss.

ASHVILLE

Capt. Howard W. Mahaffey arrived home Friday and is on terminal leave. Capt. Mahaffey, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Mahaffey, served several months as a Flight Surgeon at an Army Air Field near Tokyo, Japan.

Stanley Smith, who has been confined to Grant Hospital this week because of persistent nose bleeding which began last week, was reported as able to sit up Friday. It was expected that he would receive a blood transfusion to replace lost blood sometime Friday or Saturday.

Judith Fischer, who underwent a tonsillectomy at Dr. Emswiler's private hospital Monday, has almost completely recovered and is playing as usual.

William Withrow, manager of the Regent Amusement company, Dayton, visited in Ashville Friday. He reported that his carnival, which will be at the Ashville July Fourth celebration, is now playing at Washington C. H. He promises a ferris wheel for adults, a merry-go-round for youngsters, and several other rides for the celebration.

A fireworks display will climax the July Fourth celebration this year. This feature was missing at last year's show, but the committee in charge, has been promised a fine display for this year. An added attraction this year will be airplane rides which will be available for those desiring to ride at a nearby field.

The pea pack is in full swing at the local canning factory with late hours being the rule this week which is expected to see most of the crop canned. Farmers have been having considerable difficulty in harvesting the peas because of the heavy rains which make cutting the vines difficult.

The Ashville Intermediate Knot Hole baseball team lost its first game Thursday to Reynoldsville on the latter's diamond 6 to 5. A late inning rally in semi-darkness cost the game for the locals who led most of the way. Plans are being made to enter a team in the senior league.

H. J. Bowers left early today for a business trip to New York City. He expects to return the first of July.

HUGHSON BESTS BOB FELLER, 1-0

Phils Climb Out Of Cellar By Beating Reds 2-1; Dodgers Gain

NEW YORK, June 22—Tex Hughson, the lean righthander who was supposed to be the kingpin of the Boston Red Sox staff but turned out to be their only losing pitcher during an early-season spurt, was back on the throne today, a fitting place for a man who outpitched Bob Feller.

Hughson's victory last night was a royal job by any angle. He allowed only three hits in taking the 1 to 0 game from Cleveland. Feller allowed five. Hughson struck out nine; Feller seven. And Hughson's victory was of inestimable value in the morale department. It stopped a four-game Boston losing streak, and such a triumph, coming over the best pitcher in baseball, was a tremendous shot in the arm for the stumbling Sox, who had lost seven of eight previous games. The one victory was by Hughson at Chicago.

Also to be considered was the effect it would have on the New York Yankees, who fell before Hal Newhouser at Detroit, 6 to 2, to drop to 7 1/2 games off the pace. The Yanks had begun to revive pennant hopes as Boston lost game after game.

The Red Sox made their own breaks as they won. Bobby Doerr opened the second inning with a triple. Rudy York, next up, fouled deep behind first base. Doerr streaked for home as the ball touched first baseman Les Fleming's glove, and Lou Boudreau, apparently unaware Doerr was running, cut off Fleming's desperate throw.

New York fumbled away its game at Detroit. Four Yankee errors gave the Tigers their first four runs, and lefty Joe Page filled the bases on walks to set up the last two, which were clasped as earned because Detroit drove them in with hits. Newhouser allowed four hits, including a double by Charley Keller in the ninth, followed by Joe DiMaggio's homer. Cecil Travis singled with the bases filled in the ninth inning to give Washington a 4 to 2 victory over the St. Louis Browns.

A ninth-inning rally also carried Philadelphia to victory over the Chicago White Sox. Hits by Buddy Rosar, Hank Majeski and Phil Marchildon scored two runs for a 5 to 3 verdict.

Brooklyn outslugged the St. Louis Cardinals before a capacity crowd of 32,000 at Ebbets field, winning 7 to 5 to stretch their lead over the Red Birds to 2 1/2 games.

The Phils zoomed out of the cellar by edging Cincinnati, 2 to 1, on the three-hit pitching of Schoolboy Rowe and the batting of Del Ennis. Ennis singled in the second inning, moving up on an out and then scored on Vance Dinges' hit. Ennis' triple in the fourth batted Ron Northey home with the winning run.

The Chicago Cubs dumped the New York Giants into the basement by tripping them, 5 to 4, on the hard hitting of Phil Cavaretta and Frank Secory. Cavaretta hit a homer and double, batted in three runs and scored twice.

Boston topped Pittsburgh, 3 to 2, on Mort Cooper's pitching and the hitting of Johnny Hopp and Dan Littwhiler, each of whom got three hits. Cooper fanned seven batters in winning his sixth game, and allowed eight hits. Mike McCormick singled home the winning run in the sixth inning.

CRIPPLED VET GETS KICK OUT OF TITLE BOUT

NEW YORK, June 22—The Louis-Conn fight was all fight for Kenneth Hickey, a Canadian soldier. It restored his interest in life.

For more than two years Hickey sat silent in a Toronto hospital. His left leg was gone, his right foot was in a cast and he had a bullet in his chest. Doctors said he was so depressed he refused to talk.

His fellow patients noticed that Hickey was listening while they discussed the approaching fight for the world's heavyweight championship. They took up a collection and bought Hickey a ticket. The Red Cross brought him to New York, got him a hotel room and saw that he got to the stadium in his wheel chair.

Hickey enjoyed the fight if others didn't. He then spent two days seeing New York, and was on his way back to Toronto today, talking gaily about the good time he had.

BREADON STILL SILENT

AA SCORES IN SCRAP TO STOP BERTELLI PLAY

NEW YORK, June 22—The All-America football conference, battling to keep the Boston Yanks from using Angelo Bertelli for two years, had achieved at least temporary success from two angles today, restraining Bertelli from playing and owner Ted Collins from using him.

The action against Collins was filed yesterday in U. S. district court for southern New York, and Judge John Knox issued a temporary restraining order against Collins. The owner was ordered to appear Tuesday to show cause why he should not be enjoined from using Bertelli during the 1946 and 1947 seasons. The former star Notre Dame quarterback signed with the Los Angeles Dons for those seasons, then jumped to Collins' team.

The Dons also obtained a temporary order restraining Collins from tampering with other All-America conference players, and asked the court, to award such damages as it may see fit.

Bertelli's case comes up for permanent hearing at Boston next month. Both Bertelli and Collins say Bertelli will stay with Boston, even if he must sit on the bench for two years.

An added attraction this year will be airplane rides which will be available for those desiring to ride at a nearby field.

The pea pack is in full swing at the local canning factory with late hours being the rule this week which is expected to see most of the crop canned. Farmers have been having considerable difficulty in harvesting the peas because of the heavy rains which make cutting the vines difficult.

The Ashville Intermediate Knot Hole baseball team lost its first game Thursday to Reynoldsville on the latter's diamond 6 to 5. A late inning rally in semi-darkness cost the game for the locals who led most of the way. Plans are being made to enter a team in the senior league.

H. J. Bowers left early today for a business trip to New York City. He expects to return the first of July.

HUGHSON BESTS BOB FELLER, 1-0

Phils Climb Out Of Cellar By Beating Reds 2-1; Dodgers Gain

NEW YORK, June 22—Tex Hughson, the lean righthander who was supposed to be the kingpin of the Boston Red Sox staff but turned out to be their only losing pitcher during an early-season slump, was back on the throne today, a fitting place for a man who outpitched Bob Feller.

Hughson's victory last night was a royal job from any angle. He allowed only three hits in taking the 1 to 0 game from Cleveland. Feller allowed five. Hughson struck out nine; Feller seven. And Hughson's victory was of inestimable value in the morale department. It stopped a four-game Boston losing streak, and such a triumph, coming over the best pitcher in baseball, was a tremendous shot in the arm for the stumbling Sox, who had lost seven of eight previous games. The one victory was by Hughson at Chicago.

Also to be considered was the effect it would have on the New York Yankees, who fell before Hal Newhouser at Detroit, 6 to 2, to drop to 7 1/2 games off the pace. The Yankees had begun to revive pennant hopes as Boston lost game after game.

The Red Sox made their own breaks as they won. Bobby Doerr opened the second inning with a triple, Rudy York, next up, fouled deep behind first base. Doerr streaked for home as the ball touched first baseman Les Fleming's glove, and Lou Boudreau, apparently unaware Doerr was running, cut off Fleming's desperate throw.

New York fumbled away its game at Detroit. Four Yankee errors gave the Tigers their first four runs, and left Joe Page filled the bases on walks to set up the last two, which were classed as earned because Detroit drove them in with hits. Newhouser allowed four hits, including a double by Charley Keller in the ninth, followed by Joe DiMaggio's homer.

Cecil Travis singled with the bases filled in the ninth inning to give Washington a 4 to 2 victory over the St. Louis Browns.

A ninth-inning rally also carried Philadelphia to victory over the Chicago White Sox. Hits by Buddy Rosar, Hank Majeski and Phil Marchiondo scored two runs for a 5 to 3 verdict.

Brooklyn outslugged the St. Louis Cardinals before a capacity crowd of 32,000 at Ebbets field, winning 7 to 5 to stretch their lead over the Red Birds to 2 1/2 games.

The Phils zoomed out of the cellar by edging Cincinnati, 2 to 1, on the three-hit pitching of Schoolboy Rowe and the batting of Del Ennis. Ennis singled in the second inning, moving up on an out and then scored on Vance Dinges' hit. Ennis' triple in the fourth batted Ron Northey home with the winning run.

The Chicago Cubs dumped the New York Giants into the basement by tripping them, 5 to 4, on the hard hitting of Phil Cavaretta and Frank Secory. Cavaretta hit a homer and double, batted in three runs and scored twice.

Boston topped Pittsburgh, 3 to 2, on Mort Cooper's pitching and the hitting of Johnny Hopp and Dan Litwhiler, each of whom got three hits. Cooper fanned seven batters in winning his sixth game, and allowed eight hits. Mike McCormick singled home the winning run in the sixth inning.

CRIPPLED VET GETS KICK OUT OF TITLE BOUT

NEW YORK, June 22—The Louis-Conn fight was all fight for Kenneth Hickey, a Canadian soldier. It restored his interest in life.

For more than two years Hickey sat silent in a Toronto hospital. His left leg was gone, his right foot was in a cast and he had a bullet in his chest. Doctors said he was so depressed he refused to talk.

His fellow patients noticed that Hickey was listening while they discussed the approaching fight for the world's heavyweight championship. They took up a collection and bought Hickey a ticket. The Red Cross brought him to New York, got him a hotel room and saw that he got to the stadium in his wheel chair.

Hickey enjoyed the fight if others didn't. He then spent two days seeing New York, and was on his way back to Toronto today, talking gaily about the good time he had.

AA SCORES IN SCRAP TO STOP BERTELLI PLAY

NEW YORK, June 22—The All-America football conference, battling to keep the Boston Yanks from using Angelo Bertelli for two years, had achieved at least temporary success from two angles today, restraining Bertelli from playing and owner Ted Collins from using him.

The action against Collins was filed yesterday in U. S. district court for southern New York, and Judge John Knox issued a temporary restraining order against Collins. The owner was ordered to appear Tuesday to show cause why he should not be enjoined from using Bertelli during the 1946 and 1947 seasons. The former star Notre Dame quarterback signed with the Los Angeles Dons for those seasons, then jumped to Collins' team.

The Dons also obtained a temporary order restraining Collins from tampering with other All-America conference players, and asked the court to award such damages as it may see fit.

Bertelli's case comes up for permanent hearing at Boston next month. Both Bertelli and Collins say Bertelli will stay with Boston, even if he must sit on the bench for two years.

ISALY'S LOSE 5-4 THRILLER

Williams And McNabb Score Winning Run In Seventh; Wellington Gives 3 Hits

Isaly's lost a 5-4 game to Williams and McNabb of Columbus Friday night at Del Lewis park.

The visitors scored two runs in the third on no hits, using three errors and a walk. Isaly's scored four in the third on two hits and three errors. Williams and McNabb won in the seventh on two hits, a walk and error.

Dick Wellington allowed the visitors only three hits and struck out three. Nallie struck out six while giving up five hits.

In a preliminary game Freshmen defeated Eighth grade team 14-13.

Saturday night another doubleheader is planned. Blue Ribbon meeting United Mine Workers of Chillicothe and Richards Implement entertaining Sianese Grill of Columbus.

Pickaway Farmers Digging Out After Flood Waters Leave

SCIOTO RIVER BACK IN BANKS AS SUN SHINES

County Crop Losses Run Into Thousands; Corn, Wheat Fields Ruined

With the flood menace definitely gone hundreds of farmers in the Circleville area Saturday were planning ways and means to recoup some of their crop losses.

The waters of the rampaging Scioto river and of swollen smaller streams earlier in the week inundated hundreds of acres of cultivated fields, mostly corn and wheat.

Although no official estimate of the total damage has been given, unofficial estimates of the flood loss in Pickaway county range up to $100,000.

The stage of the Scioto river, which reached a peak of approximately 18 feet or four feet above flood stage, and sent water swirling over lowlands and roads, was steadily receding Saturday. The measurement was 13.48 feet at 9 a. m., as compared with 16.52 feet 24 hours earlier.

The weather forecast is for continued fair skies for at least another few days. The farmers are hoping for a continuance of cool temperatures so that a blazing sun will not "bake" the flood-damaged areas.

Many crops—especially corn—have been ruined by the flood waters. It is believed too late in the season to sow a new crop. Many of the losers are considering the planting of soy beans or sweet corn in the damaged fields.

Old-timers in the district recalled that many years ago that a dike extended for approximately 15 miles along the Scioto provided protection to farmers against the

YOUTHS HELD IN CONNECTION WITH CAR THEFT

Michael Shevlin, 20, and George Brossman, 19, Columbus college students, accused of automobile theft, were released Friday from the Madison county jail, London, by Sheriff Harold Bidwell, to Columbus police.

The arrest of the pair occurred Thursday afternoon after the stolen car had been wrecked one and one-fourth miles south of Mt. Sterling on State Route 3. The machine, while being driven at high speed, swerved from the roadway and turned over several times. The car was badly damaged and Shevlin and Brossman suffered minor cuts and bruises.

The youths—one of whom lost his trousers and the other his shirt in the accident—made their way to a farmhouse for first aid. The farmer notified Sheriff Bidwell. Unaware that the automobile had been stolen at Columbus the sheriff released the youths after questioning them.

While Shevlin and Brossman were at a bus station, awaiting transportation to Columbus, State Highway Patrolman Charles W. Scott, Circleville, arrived and informed Sheriff Bidwell that the wrecked car was the property of John Braun, Columbus, and had been stolen Wednesday night.

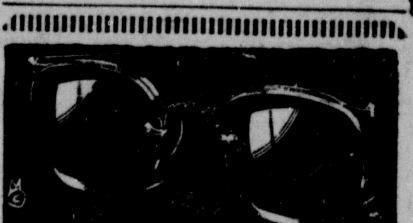

Sheriff Bidwell hurried to the bus station and took the two youths into custody. Patrolman Scott said they readily admitted stealing the machine following a drinking spree in a Columbus tavern. Shevlin said he was a student at Ohio State university, and Brossman said he was enrolled at Franklin university.

YOUTHS HELD IN CONNECTION WITH CAR THEFT

Michael Shevlin, 20, and George Brossman, 19, Columbus college students, accused of automobile theft, were released Friday from the Madison county jail, London, by Sheriff Harold Bidwell, to Columbus police.

The arrest of the pair occurred Thursday afternoon after the stolen car had been wrecked one and one-fourth miles south of Mt. Sterling on State Route 3. The machine, while being driven at high speed, swerved from the roadway and turned over several times. The car was badly damaged and Shevlin and Brossman suffered minor cuts and bruises.

The youths—one of whom lost his trousers and the other his shirt in the accident—made their way to a farmhouse for first aid. The farmer notified Sheriff Bidwell. Unaware that the automobile had been stolen at Columbus the sheriff released the youths after questioning them.

While Shevlin and Brossman were at a bus station, awaiting transportation to Columbus, State Highway Patrolman Charles W. Scott, Circleville, arrived and informed Sheriff Bidwell that the wrecked car was the property of John Braun, Columbus, and had been stolen Wednesday night.

Sheriff Bidwell hurried to the bus station and took the two youths into custody. Patrolman Scott said they readily admitted stealing the machine following a drinking spree in a Columbus tavern. Shevlin said he was a student at Ohio State university, and Brossman said he was enrolled at Franklin university.
